What Business, Mr. Edison?

Crime and Bootlegging

THOMAS A. EDISON tells President Hoover, through the Illinois Manufacturing News, that "one of the highest duties of the President is to keep the government out of business."

That depends on the kind of business, on the honesty and efficiency.

Mr. Edison wouldn't have the government abandon the post-office and turn it over to Wall Street promoters.

The postoffice is a business. It carries a letter from the southern tip of Florida to the northern tip of Alaska for two cents. And carries it safely.

New York explodes gasoline in a big way. In the first six months of 1929, the State taxed 774,701,748 gallons of gasoline, not including gasoline used by farmers.

It would have taken 968 freight trains, of 80 cars each, to carry that gasoline. Who would have believed that when Senator Cosgens was investing less than $2000 in the little Ford car he would take out, within a short time $30,000,000 as his share?

A Coast Guard ship, chasing a rum-running boat, killed three of the four men on board, wounded the fourth. Other rum-running killings, here and there, in the day's news.

Rear Admiral Billard warns bootleggers that his coast guard means business. No "soft words" will be used. Rum runners are told they will stop when ordered or "get hurt."

Ida M. Tarbell deplores prohibition and asks, "Is prohibition forcing civil war?"

Before the Civil War there were "Anti and Pro-Slavery parties."

Miss Tarbell sees now a wet and a dry party, and repeats the question that Karl Schurz asked five years before Ft. Sumter was fired on, "Can this fight be decided without powder?"

The Moderation League, perhaps prejudiced, says intoxication is increasing rapidly among children, the rate of death from alcoholism is higher, and arrests for drunkenness in 1928 were most numerous since 1914.

Prohibition is here; it is in the Constitution, and there it will outlast any now living.

"A great number of young people are drinking from a sense of bravado."

It may be bravado, but that will not help the young people's kidneys, brains or character, unfortunately.

The question for the people is "What can be done about it?"

Thomas Jefferson told the Legislature of Virginia, giving a letter of introduction for an English brewer, that he thought light beer and wine the only means of combating whiskey.

That idea has been abandoned.

India seeks absolute self-government, suggesting refusal to pay taxes, a situation that worries Britain's Labor government in charge of India among other imperial details.

If the well meaning Mahatma Gandhi has his way, India will learn a lesson.

Taxes collected by Rajahs, or over-night dictators, would NOT be used to supply pure water, or fight plague and famine.

There is a fertile field for sowing Russian propaganda, only more than 290,000,000 of the 300,000,000 inhabitants of India wouldn't know what the Russians were talking about.

Governor Roosevelt of New York asks $800,000 for more prisons, an emergency appropriation of $1,000,000.

Why not have separate prisons for young criminals, all under 21, instead of locking them up with the old criminals, to learn their trade more thoroughly.

It happens that very young criminals are the most numerous, dangerous, cruel and generally given to murder. They need special treatment.

The head of a New York drug ring included in his private telephone list the number of the distinguished judge whose welcome home dinner was attended by many well-known criminals, and enlivened by a hold-up.

New York also learns that another judge promoted advertising, legal and other, in a publication that had no real existence, was never printed.

The imaginary manager of the imaginary manual, possessed of a police record, was once discharged by the kind judge that supplied advertising to the manual.

Shakespeare might have put all that in his highly imaginative play, "The Tempest."

Mulhern Asks Removal of Civil Service Head

72 DEAD IN FIRE

SEEK SENATE QUIZ IN RUM KILLINGS

Senator Metcalf to Demand Action; Federal Attorney Refuses Aid in State Inquiry

Federal government officers and the coast guard service refused today to co-operate with the state of Rhode Island in a Newport county grand jury investigation of the slaying of three rum-runners by coast guardsmen.

At the same time, Senator Jesse H. Metcalf of Rhode Island said he would demand an investigation by the Senate of the killings unless probes now in pgrogress "go to the root of the matter."

The government's refusal to co-operate came from U. S. Atty. Henry M. Boss, Jr., at Providence. He declined to turn over to Asst. Atty.-Gen. Benjamin M. McLyman facts in his possession concerning the encounter of the Black Duck with the C. G. 290 off Newport Sunday.

Boss has a detailed report of

MULHERN FOR OUSTING CIVIL SERVICE HEAD

Calls on Governor Allen to Remove E. H. Goodwin as Result of Protests

State Senator Joseph J. Mulhearn, in a letter to Governor Allen, today declared that a great mass of the public demand the removal of Eliot Goodwin, as civil service commissioner.

He quoted the legislative report on the operation of the civil service commission to the effect that:

"There has been a pronounced attitude on the part of the Commissioner not in keeping with the standards which the people of the Commonwealth have a right to expect to be maintained in so important an office."

"Demanding the removal of Eliot H. Goodwin," Senator Mulhern wrote, "you will find the American Legion, a great number of city and town officials, almost all the members of the Legislature, Senate and House of Representatives, Republicans and Democrats alike, and my a vast majority of the thousands of Civil Service workers and applicants, particularly in the larger cities."

Stand Guard Over Captive Rum Runner

The Coast Guard is taking no chance of Charles Travers escaping from the Newport Hospital, where he was taken after the other members of the crew of the Black Duck were slain when the vessel, loaded with liquor, was captured. One armed guardsman is shown standing at the doorway of Travers room and another is taking it easy in a comfortable chair. The picture was taken at 3 a. m. (Staff photo.)

CHILDREN CRUSHED, AND SMOTHERED IN SCOTTISH THEATER

Paisley, Scotland, Dec. 31 (AP)—At least seventy-two persons, most of them children, were officially estimated to have perished in a fire which swept through a motion picture theater here crowded with youngsters at a holiday matinee.

Panic began when flames shot from the operator's box and quickly enveloped the auditorium.

By a curious ironic twist the film which the children had been watching was "The Crowd."

So great was the crush of struggling boys and girls to gain safety from the holocaust that firemen had the greatest difficulty in dragging them through the doorways.

Outside stood many parents, horror-stricken and helpless as firemen, constables and civilians rushed to battle the flames to bring the young victims to safety.

The dense clouds of smoke which came from the structure were so great that it was necessary to use gas masks, some of them improvised.

More than 150 children were taken to a nearby infirmary suffering from burns and injuries which they had received in the mad rush from the building.

A constant stream of tram cars and wagons pressed into service arrived at the infirmary bearing the little victims, many dead and others in a comatose condition. All emergency measures were taken to care for the injured.

Many of the deaths occurred at the infirmary when the victims of the crush and panic were carried. Most of those who succumbed at the infirmary met deaths from injuries, chiefly internal, rather than from burns.

The deaths of the largest number of victims was stated to be due to carbon monoxide poisoning from fumes that filled the theater.

It was apparent the children had been overcome as they swayed helplessly in the auditorium trying to find an exit to the pure air outside.

Some of the children showed extensive scratches on their knees and faces as though they had been the victims of hysterical fears.

The film had unwound about half of the story of "The Crowd" when a sheet of flame shot out of the projection box.

WILD RUSH FOR EXITS.

The sudden ending of the show turned all eyes to the operator's quarters and there was an immediate cry of "fire" from all sections of the house.

A wild rush started for the exits. The aisles were filled with struggling boys and girls who fought blindly to reach the doors.

But the doorways themselves were also quickly jammed. As those in front went down under the crushing pressure from the crowd in the rear, the victims piled themselves into struggling heaps.

It was this condition which confronted the firemen and constables when they reached the place.

The rescuers fought grimly to disentangle the children and clear the way for those who were still held in the theater.

The task was made the more difficult by the crowding forward of parents who rushed to the scene as the alarm spread rapidly through the murky mill town.

HOUSE SEATED 750

Fortunately the fire itself did not spread to the theater and after the place had been cleared it showed little trace of damage.

Had the flames taken hold of the structure the death list would have mounted into the hundreds because none of those imprisoned behind the jammed doorways could have escaped asphyxiation.

The theater seats 750 persons. As today's performance was billed as a special holiday matinee for children, the house was fully occupied by youngsters of from 3 to 14 years of age.

Virtually all of these children

Judge Letts Attacks Fitzpatrick 'Deal'

Providence, R. I., Dec. 31—A bitter attack was made upon U. S. Attorney Henry M. Boss, Jr., today by Judge Ira L. Letts of U. S. district court in connection with the resignation of First Asst. U. S. Atty. Joseph B. Fitzpatrick.

The resignation is effective tonight. Fitzpatrick charged he was forced to quit office under political pressure.

In a statement today Judge Letts praised Fitzpatrick and condemned Boss.

The statement by Judge Letts in part follows: "As judge of the U. S. court for Rhode Island I am reluctant to intrude in the controversy relative to Mr. Fitzpatrick's dismissal. I am convinced, however, in view of what has transpired, that the public of this community are entitled to a statement.

"Somewhat over a year ago I experienced a trying period because of the appearance of the hand of politics in the United States attorney's office. When that office was vacated the duty devolved upon me to appoint an acting United States attorney. I appointed Mr. Boss upon the distinct understanding that he would not be a candidate for the political long term appointment and because I reposed in him the most unlimited personal confidence."

This will be the first time since his marriage that he will receive his friends alone, his wife having died since his 69th birthday.

"I know my wife would want me to receive my friends on my birthday tomorrow, the same as we always did," said Gen. Edwards, "and so I will follow the custom of other years."

When asked how old he would be tomorrow Gen Edwards said, "Well, I will confess to 40 years. I don't feel any older."

The General says he does not expect any birthday presents. "My brother was born on Christmas Day and I on New Year's Day. Neither of us ever got any birthday presents because of the days on which we were born, but we always had a good time."

Gen Edwards said persons in 1800 automobiles from all parts of the world, visited him Christmas.

JUDGE GIVES BOY A CHANCE

The new year held prospects for anything but happiness for Mrs. Agnes G. Hartwell, a widow, when she stood outside juvenile court at Brockton today and heard Judge Rowe sentence her 15-year-old son, Eugene, to a training school for being an habitual truant.

She fainted in the corridor. Among several persons who helped revive her was Walter Rapp, vice-president of the Brockton Agricultural Society. She told Rapp the story and Rapp recalled that her deceased husband had been a friend.

Upon the adjournment of court, Rapp, Judge Rowe and Eugene went into a conference. Judge Rowe revoked the sentence, continued the case until Thursday and Rapp furnished $100 bail for the boy. Before Thursday, Rapp, the court and Eugene are expected to reach some agreement that will allow the boy to remain with his mother.

Prosperous 1930 Is Seen by Gov. Allen

By FRANK G. ALLEN, GOVERNOR OF MASSACHUSETTS

Written Exclusively for the Boston Evening American.

WE have here in Massachusetts the best of reasons, I believe, for looking forward confidently to prosperous business conditions during 1930.

Our industries continue to be progressive. The genius and enterprise of our industrial leaders have secured, where needed, replacement industries in a very helpful extent. Fisheries, agriculture, and many branches of industry are rapidly increasing their contributions to our prosperity.

President Hoover's business program will do much towards stabilizing conditions all over the country, and I am glad to say that Massachusetts is already launched upon an extensive and definite plan of co-operation. Our program for public works in Massachusetts this coming year will be one of the largest in the history of our Commonwealth.

Massachusetts has always enjoyed a reputation for industry, energy, resourcefulness and self-reliance, and I am fully confident that there will be steady advance and undiminished vigor in the operation of its varied industries during 1930, and that we may look forward to a year of broader business development, of sound employment conditions, and of general prosperity.

Easter Island First to Greet New Year

On Easter Island, 180 degrees east and west from Greenwich, the place where the day officially starts, 1930 was ushered in at 5:00 a. m. E. S. T. today.

Boston is precisely 19 hours 19 minutes and 22 seconds behind Easter Island in the reckoning of time. This would make the sun rise on Easter Island at 4:40:38 o'clock this morning, but as our time is now figured on the basis of the same hour for each 15 degrees of longitude, it makes a difference of exactly 19 hours.

Easter Island is located in the South Pacific Ocean and is remarkable for its colossal human figures in stone of undetermined origin.

5 MEN UNDER ARREST IN R. I. FOR COAST GUARD RUM THEFT

Liquor Is Put Under Heavy Guard; the U. S. Grand Jury Will Not Act

the shooting made by coast guard headquarters at New London and, assuming the position that he will act as defense counsel for the patrol boat's crew in any court action, he refused to turn it over to McLyman.

The assistant attorney general desired to have official photographs made of bullet holes and other evidence aboard the Black Duck and was informed that the New London coast guard base that he could not have access either to the rum runner or the patrol boat.

While a wave of public protest caused by the shootings swept over the New London base, gaining momentum with the report that coast guardsmen had raided the seized liquor cargoes, there was every indication from official sources that the government would balk all attempts by the State to indict the patrol boat crew at grand jury proceedings.

TO FIGHT EXTRADITION.

U. S. Atty. Boss declared that even if the men were indicted by a county grand jury, there was a considerable question in his mind whether they could be extradited from Connecticut to stand trial.

Then, if such indictments should be forthcoming and it were found possible to extradite the crew from Rhode Island, hearings of the charges would be transferred from the State courts to the federal court at Providence and Boss would be counsel for the men.

The attorney-general's office has three investigators working on the case but so far not one of them has been permitted to interview Charlie Travers, sole survivor of the Black Duck's crew, who is still under guard at the Newport hospital.

GRAND JURY NEXT WEEK

Progress on his investigation was admittedly very slow, Asst. Atty-Gen. McLyman said, and he did not expect to gather enough evidence to summon a grand jury before next week at the earliest.

Other developments of the coast guard rum war situation were:

1—Arrest of five coast guardsmen at the New London base for theft of liquor seized from aboard the rum ship Flor del Mar, and announcement they would be courtmartialed.

2—Arrest of four other persons by New London police following a party staged with the alleged liquor.

3—Seizure of stolen liquor from drunken coast guardsmen and in one instance from a coast guard destroyer.

GRAND JURY TO ACT

4—Posting of a heavily armed guard over the $500,000 liquor cargo on board the seized ships, Black Duck, Roamer and Flor Del Mar to prevent further raids.

5—Definite announcement that a Newport County grand jury would investigate the slaying of Dudley Brandt, of Boston; Jake Weisman, of Providence, and John Goglart, of Fairhaven; crew of the Black Duck.

6—Announcement that the findings of the coast guard's one man board of inquiry into the slaying would not be made public.

Boatswain Alexander C. Cornell and his crew of seven men who manned the C. G. 280 which spouted death into the pilot house of the Black Duck in the fog and darkness of Narragansett Bay, were under nominal arrest at the New London base, awaiting the results of the inquiry being conducted by Lieut. Comdr. C. C. Von Paulsen, the one man official board of the service.

The results of his investigation will be transmitted to Washington but will not be made public, Capt. Chalker declared.

Meanwhile, Medical Examiner Samuel Adelson of Newport pursued his own investigation of the tragedy, ordering a coroner's inquest, Coroner Percy F. Dawley to set Thursday afternoon for the opening of proceedings.

21 Boats on Liquor Patrol Off New York

New York, Dec. 31 (AP)—A fleet of more than 20 coast guard patrol boats and destroyers, with the cutter Champlain, today was maintaining a blockade of the shore from Montauk Point, Long Island, to New Jersey to prevent rum-running.

Although three foreign ships supposedly loaded with liquor were reported off Montauk Point, coast guard officers said there was no chance of any liquor ship getting through the blockade. They pointed out that several small craft had been seized within the past few days.

While coast guard patrol in vain searched the waters for 50 miles off the Long Island coast for a "mother ship" reported two days ago to be transferring liquor to two small auxiliary craft, three motor boats, one a rum-runner, were seized off the New Jersey coast.

Senator Wants Court to Say Whether Rum Buyer Is Guilty

Washington, Dec. 31 (AP)—A test before the Supreme Court of the culpability of purchasers of liquor under the present law was advocated today by Senator Reed, Republican dry leader, in connection with legislation now pending to make purchasers equally guilty with bootleggers.

Senator Jones withheld comment on legislation proposed by Senator Sheppard, Democrat, Texas, pending final action by the courts. He said conflicting decisions on this issue have been rendered in the federal district courts, and expressed the hope the Department of Justice would press for a Supreme Court decision.

600 Cases of Rum, Four Men Caught by Coast Guard

New London, Ct., Dec. 31 (AP)—The fishing boat Leona M. Sproul, with 600 cases of liquor aboard, was seized off Montauk Point and her crew of four taken prisoners by the coast guard patrol boat CG-148 early today.

The patrol boat, in command of Boatswain W. J. Hynes, brought the craft to the State pier here, where it was tied up alongside three others captured by the coast guard over the week-end. The four men were held under guard pending their transfer to New York.

Mellon's Scalp Demanded Again by Sen. Brookhart

Washington, Dec. 31 (AP)—The second demand for the resignation of Andrew W. Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury, during the current prohibition controversy, came today from Senator Brookhart, Iowa, a Republican dry, who said he wanted not only Mellon removed but others in the Treasury Department identified with enforcement.

Wide Areas Flooded After English Gale

London, Dec. 31 (AP)—Floods in England increased today as the full result of the deluge accompanying the week-end gale were felt. Wide areas were submerged, traffic hindered and serious damage inflicted.

In some sections the Thames rose rapidly, overflowing its banks and forming a series of great lakes, blocking many roads. The rivers Severn, Wye, Dee and Tees-side and their tributaries overflowed their banks and submerged wide areas.

German Court Bans U. S. Talkie Machine

'Victims' Beat Thug to Death in Speakeasy

New York, Dec. 31 (AP)—Eight men in an establishment in West 33d st., described by the police as a speakeasy, turned on two holdup men early today, beating one of them to death and seriously injuring the other.

The victim was identified by the police from his fingerprints as William Rogers, 24. His record showed an arrest for robbery last month. The other said he was Timothy Shine, 18, of Brooklyn. He denied a holdup had been attempted.

James Kelly, 45, the proprietor, said he and his bartender, James Gavin, 40, were behind the bar when the two men entered. There were four patrons in a rear room and two at the bar. He said Rogers and Shine ordered two drinks apiece and then putting their hands in their overcoat pockets as if holding pistols, ordered the bar tender, himself and two patrons to place their hands onn the bar.

All four men complied, but hearing whispers in the rear room the holdup men ordered the four to the rear room also. As they started for the rear, one of the intended victims expressed doubt that the holdup men had guns, and picking up a baseball bat buried it. The bat struck Rogers on the head, felling him.

The others then joined in an attack on them. When the police arrived the two bandits were lying on the floor, one of them dead. The patrons had disappeared.

Shine, who suffered severe lacerations and bruises of the head and a fracture of the right wrist, was held on a charge of attempted robbery. Kelly and Gavin were charged with suspicion of homicide. Police said no gun was found on either man.

It was the third holdup in as many days in which the victims turned on their captors. In a Chinatown pool room Monday a lone robber was beaten unconscious by 15 men and Saturday five youths fled from a Revere poolroom under a barrage of billiard balls after obtaining $300 and seriously wounding a policeman.

BLOODY AUTO'S DRIVER SOUGHT

Missing since last Saturday when his wrecked and blood-stained car was found in Allen av., West End, Gordon Edmunds, 25, of Glendale st., Dorchester, was sought today by his family and police.

What happened to the man or to the car police have been unable to learn. His eyeglasses and blood-stained hat were in the car when found.

Yesterday his sister received a telephone call from some man who refused to identify himself. He told her where the car was located, but police already had notified the family.

Edmunds is 6 feet tall, weighs 160 pounds, has light hair and has but one eye, the right one.

U. S. Buyer May Get Ancient Jewels From Germany

Hanover, Germany, Dec. 31 (AP)—A last attempt to raise for Germany the famous Guelph treasure of early handwrought jewels and furniture, which the former Duke of Brunswick is seeking to sell, apparently has failed since the municipal council decided against the purchase.

The municipality had an option to buy the treasure for 10,000,000 marks, an option which expires today, leaving the duke free to close a deal with another purchasing syndicate which is reported acting for Americans.

The collection includes relics brought by Henry the Lion from the Holy Land in 1173. The duke is the husband of the former Kaiser's only daughter, Victoria Louise.

SEES A CHANCE FOR GODDARD'S FAMED ROCKET

Prof. Stewart Says That Very Powerful Fuel Must Be Used to Win Success

"Goddard's rocket has a fighting chance."

This was the comment today of Prof. J. Q. Stewart of Princeton, here for the three-day convention at Harvard of the American Astronomical Association.

The associate professor of astronomical physics read a paper on the general subjects of rocket principles in interplanetary travel, tonight or Wednesday forenoon.

In an interview with the Boston Evening American, Prof. Stewart discussed the mathematical factors in shooting off large rockets.

An explosive speed of "16 miles per second" would be required of the fuel-power designed to lift the rocket off the ground fast enough to tear itself away from the earth's natural attraction, he said.

The professor pointed out that the rate of speed necessary to an object to hurl itself out into space and keep going, is seven miles per second. Such a speed can only be obtained by extra-powerful explosive fuel, which obviously will weigh heavily, he continued.

"The heavier the load," he said, "the lower the efficiency factors."

His inference was that Goddard's rocket cannot travel very high unless it has a tremendously powerful fuel, which in itself much occupy a large part of the rocket shell.

"Still," he added, "I would say that his rocket has a fighting chance to make good height, if he uses the right fuel. I have not studied his rocket but I am willing to concede that his objectives are within the realm of possibility."

Prof. Stewart said he was not sufficiently informed of Goddard's aims to comment on them in detail. When told by the interviewer that Goddard has no intention of shooting at the moon, but rather of getting a recording rocket higher than man has been, he said:

"Certainly he ought in time to get a rocket up 30,000 feet, or more, but there are many questions involved. He probably knows these very well."

Asked his opinion of human travel between planets, he said it was at problem for the next century.

Stuart Wyeth Dies

Philadelphia, Dec. 31 (AP)—Stuart Wyeth, 67, president of John Wyeth & Son, Inc., one of the oldest and largest manufacturing chemical firms in the east, is dead.

WIFE IS SLAIN IN LEADING BURGLARY

Woman Masquerading as Man Aids Husband and Two Children in Crime

Rochester, N. Y., Dec. 31 (AP)—Masquerading as a man and leading her husband and two of her six children on an early morning burglary, Mrs. Winifred Shields, 33, was fatally shot today as she fled from the store she had been burglarizing.

Ernest Stott, store keeper in the Summerville boulevard, had been sleeping in the rear of his store since a recent burglar, and was aroused by the ringing of his cash register bell.

Starting for the front of the store he saw two men and two boys fleeing from the front entrance. Stott ran to the street and fired five shots, one of the quartet falling to the ground.

When he reached her side, Stott recognized Mrs. Shields. She had been shot in the head and died before the arrival of a doctor.

Her husband, James, Sr., 45, and two of her sons, James, Jr., 17, and Gordon, 16, returned when the woman fell and were arrested by deputy sheriffs.

Mrs. Shields, who had four other children, the youngest five months old, was dressed in men's clothes and wore soft soled shoes.

The family lived in a well furnished home in Washington ave., Summerville. Stott told police that he had suspected the family of the previous burglary, as on a visit to collect a bill for new articles sold by him that had not been purchased in his store.

A sack, filled with groceries and candies, was left behind by the quartet when they fled.

MANY CHILDREN DEAD IN FIRE

came from working class homes where parents and elder brothers and sisters provide a somewhat precarious living from wages earned during intermittent operation of the mills and factories of Paisley.

HOUSEHOLDS IN GRIEF

Despite the scope of the disaster and the wild grief which seized bereaved households, the relief work has been thoroughly and carried out in an orderly manner.

But the best efforts of firemen and police failed to lessen the tragedy of the scenes at the theatre and the hospital.

Mothers crowded around the amusement place and cried in agony for news of the fate of their little ones. In the infirmary where the dead were laid out, broken-hearted parents stumbled blindly past the still forms identifying the victims.

Occasionally sounds of grief in the street were followed by wild cries of joy as a missing child who had escaped injury was found by anxious relatives.

But these instances were comparatively few and the expressions of thankfulness were quickly hushed as the joyous parents turned to comfort a neighbor who had suffered loss or was still uncertain as to the fate of a loved one.

Paisley is a town of 84,000 inhabitants on the White Cart river situated on the line junction with the Clyde. It is only seven miles from Glasgow.

The place became internationally famous for Paisley shawls, an industry which flourished from 1800 until the early eighties of the last century. These shawls were woven on hand looms with a pattern in imitation of cashmere products.

Paisley is largely a mill and manufacturing town.

It turns out soaps, starch, machinery and textiles, the latter including fine muslins and tartans. A large amount of thread is also manufactured.

Historically the city is marked chiefly by an old abbey church colonized originally by the Benedictines in 1163. In its present form this structure dates from the fourteenth fifteenth centuries. It contains the tomb of Margery, daughter of Robert Bruce, and Robert the Lord of Scotland is also buried there.

Fake Lottery Stirs Holyoke

Holyoke, Mass., Dec. 31 (AP)—A good many Holyokers would like to know the identity of the glib agent who within the past two weeks has sold from hundreds of dollars' worth of tickets in an alleged Canadian-American lottery on horse races that are to be held at New Orleans next month. They purchased the tickets at $1 apiece and tonight were notified by a Canadian official that their coupons are mere "forgeries".

One local man who had bought a block of 25 tickets became suspicious several days ago. He wrote an official of the Canadian Government who responded with the advice that although a Canadian approval stamp had been used it had either been stolen or was a good counterfeit.

WILKINS FINDS NEW LAND IN POLAR ZONE

Territory Discovered by Explorer Is Believed to Be South of Argentina

Montevideo, Uruguay, Dec. 31 (AP)—The first fruits of Sir George Hubert Wilkins' exploration flights over Antarctica were revealed today with advices he had discovered previously unknown land in his last venture over the Polar ice cap.

The government radio service announced receipt of a message to this effect from the steamer Melville, which carried the explorer to Deception Island, which he uses as a base.

Since Deception Isle, one of the South Shetland group, is in the so-called Weddell quadrant of Antarctia it is believed probable the new territory is somewhat in the vicinity, or south of Tierra Del Fuego and the Argentine.

About a third of the way round the world in nearly the same latitude Rear Admiral Byrd and his party recently have made important South Polar explorations, completing a flight over the South Pole, and discovering new land to the east of the Ross quadrant of Antarctica.

Nearly another third of the way round the world, to the east of Deception Isle, the Norwegians, Capt. Riiser Larsen and Lieut. Luetzon Holm, radioed early this week they had discovered new land in the Enderby quadrant, midway between Coats Land and Enderby Land.

WOUNDED MAN OFF DEATH RUNNER GIVES INSIDE BOOZE STORY

'MEN KILLED LIKE RATS IN HOLE'

Travers Declares Black Duck Would Have Surrendered Without Shot

By JAMES J. SMITH

Newport, R. I., Dec. 31—An inside story of the "booze racket" as it is conducted off the shores of Rhode Island was partially disclosed today by Charlie Travers, survivor of the Black Duck, whose crew of four was placed out of action by machine gun fire of Coast Guard patrol boat 250.

From his bed at Newport City Hospital, Travers in consultation with his counsel, blamed the Coast Guard for shooting him and "his buddies" like a bunch of rats in a trap.

"We were only a hundred yards away," he said, "and we were willing to turn about and take the licking.

FELT SURE OF A BREAK

"We knew we were all washed up. They threw the lights on us when we came up to the buoy to get our bearings. Weiseman, Goulart and Brandt were in the front pilot house and as soon as the lights were thrown on I heard the gun open up.

"I heard the wood breaking in the pilot house and right away I felt a stab in my arm. I fell down but I wanted to talk to Goulart so I crawled up to the pilot house.

"But Goulart was coming out on his hands and knees and I said, 'What's the matter kid?' He only said, 'They came through the coop and I guess was wrong with you so the kid was I.'

"You know we play in on the stuff. And he was always on the level. Uptown says (Uptown is Boston, Travers reminded his listener) we got to come through with plenty for New Year's. And the fog came down just right for a run through.

"So we got back to the limit and head in and the fog was so thick we were sure of a break. And when we had the light dead ahead we had the light thrown on us and then I heard the zing-zing and felt the pain in my arm.

"I took forward in the pilot house and Weiseman and Goulart and Brandt are all falling down and making funny faces. But I wanted to talk with them and I kept on going forward, but my knees got weak, so I hollered, 'Lay down, lay down, they are throwing stuff.' But I couldn't see them. And then Goulart came out of the coop and he's leaking blood out of his mouth and he told me about me and my kid brother.

ALWAYS ON THE LEVEL

"And I felt terribly bad about him because he was in enough and everything and never took a drink and was always on the level.

"'Bye-bye,' he says, 'I don't know what it's all about' and when he said that I grabbed him and I said, 'Tell me, tell me, kid,' and he said, 'they went through the coop and I knew they must have fired bullets.

"I tried to hold Goulart up, but I fell down myself on the deck, and I didn't remember anything until I woke up here with the guards. Nobody on my boat would have fired a gun at anybody because we didn't have any guns, and I never fired one anyway.

"We got a racket, you know," Travers added, "A grand is a thousand dollars to us, and when the big shots Uptown put in 10 or 15 thousand for a load they want us to invest a thousand out of our own pocketbooks.

"Or maybe four or five hundred and what can we do then but protect our own money which is right in the load. That's why we take these chances. But it was too long a chance this time. The guards didn't give us a break at all and they all took the licking but me."

Poor Belgian Girls Send Princess Gift

Brussels, Dec. 31 (AP)—In the early days of the war when Princess Marie Jose was a little girl with braids she watched other girls, said born to such high station as herself, fish in the waters about Oostdinkerken.

She made friends with them and took the assignment with a rusher at the poor fisherfolk's church in the small town. While in the church she saw and admired a painting of shrimp fishing, and told them she though it a very nice picture indeed.

Today the picture was brought to the princess with the word that the fisher girls with whom she took the assignment so many years ago had remembered her compliments in their painting and had sent it to her as a wedding gift.

The princess' wedding gown will be made of white silk and velvet with a matching court coat and an 18-foot train of white velvet attached to the shoulder. A veil of Belgian lace, gift of the Belgian people, will complete the costume.

She will be married Jan. 8 to the Prince of Piedmont, Italian heir in Rome.

Dayton, O., Dec. 30 (AP)—Five bank robbers engaged in a wild gun battle with citizens and officers of Phillipsburg, O., near here, today, after they had kidnaped Ralph Davenport, cashier, in a fruitless effort to loot the Phillipsburg State Bank.

Davenport escaped from the robbers in the confusion. A posse of deputy sheriffs and 20 armed citizens at once pursued some of the bandits into the woods near town.

Davenport was slugged at his home last night. While several members of the gang stood as lookouts, two of them bound and held him prisoner.

Mrs. Davenport fainted when they took the cashier inside. They prepared coffee for her and remained until 8 a. m.

Davenport had told them, when he recovered, that the bank's time lock would not open until then.

EDDIE CANTOR Rises to Say:

BALTIMORE, Dec. 31—The Coast Guard kills three. We don't know what the score is now, but I'll bet the U. S. "dry" navy is way ahead.

Rum running is unlawful, but does it call for the death penalty?

This most recent case means that three or four cafes will be without liquor New Year's Eve. Read that and weep.

Here's an idea for Washington: The Government spends millions of dollars yearly trying to enforce the Eighteenth Amendment. Why not use the same money to purchase all the liquor brought in by the rum runners?

Then, when there is a shortage—we could sell it to the bootleggers at a big profit.

In that way you stop unwarranted shootings—do away with bribery and dishonest federal officers—and send the Senate back to the investigation of the Wall Street crash.

P. S. I believe prohibition is not a success.

SEE 3-DAY WEEK AND SUNSHINE ALL NIGHT

Former Harvard Man Tells How the Artificial Rays May Be Utilized

Des Moines, Ia., Dec. 31 (AP)—A three-day week for machine workers through use of at present unavailable energy in artificial light is suggested to the American Association for the Advancement of Science as an industrial development of the future.

It is a by product of a new field of scientific exploration which was explained to a general session of the association by Dr. W. T. Bovie, formerly of Harvard Medical school. It is based on observations which Dr. Bovie said promised the possibility of producing from artificial light, a wide range of healthful and stimulating rays that are neutralized at present because not disentangled from useless or harmful rays of the same light.

The idea of shorter working hours was suggested to him by a manufacturer and by his own observations that some workers would prefer night work if they might have as healthful conditions as in the day. With the equivalent of sunshine available artificially it might be possible, he explained, to operate machinery 24 hours a day, saving the interest on capital now lost with idle time, and developing resources to give workers the shorter week.

Dr. Bovie illustrated what he has learned about light with graphs showing sunburn produced by different kinds of light, some beneficial for health, the others apparently not so good.

Earthquake possibilities for the eastern part of the United States were discussed by James B. Macelwane, S. J., of St. Louis University.

FLIES 203 MILES PER HOUR

Chicago, Dec. 31 (AP)—Chicago to Cleveland in an hour and a half.

The record was set up yesterday by a transmotored Fokker plane on the Universal Air Line, traveling at an average of 203 miles an hour and carrying 12 passengers and two pilots.

Pilots Ray Fortner and Garnett Caldwell left the Municipal Airport at 4 p. m. and reached the Cleveland Airport 226 miles away at 5:37 p. m. It was the fastest flight on record between the cities.

Hadley Airport, N. J., Dec. 31 (AP)—All records for air travel between Cleveland, O., and the air mail terminus here were broken today when Henry Brown, one of the veteran flyers, covered the run of 394 miles in two hours and 12 minutes.

Ousted Police Head Will Fight for Job

John Armstrong, deposed chief of police of Plymouth, will fight his dismissal by the selectmen. He lost his case before the Civil Commission today at the State House.

Armstrong has been chief for 13 years and a member of the police force for 27 years.

Armstrong charges that he was summarily deposed by two of the selectmen as the committee has remained at his home for two hours on Christmas Day.

This 'Wet' Idea Is New and Something Else

Washington, Dec. 31—In a fine vein of satire, Dr. F. W. Buck executive secretary of the Federal Dispensary-Tax Reduction League, has suggested this means of enforcing the Volstead act:

Close all border ports of entry and chain naval vessels end to end for the entire length of the Pacific and Atlantic coasts to prevent smuggling.

Put prohibition agents on a salary of $1 a year to reduce taxes, and allow them a legitimate takeoff of 20 per cent. If Congress cannot agree on this percentage, "let the League of Nations settle the question," he suggests.

To relieve unemployment allow prohibition agents to remain on the job only six months. "If he is at all industrious, he can get his in that time.

To conserve health and life amend the Jones law to apply the penalty to anyone selling liquor less than a month old, and reduce the penalty $1000 a year on the age of the liquor.

"This would eventually give us something worth while out of prohibition," he added.

CURFEW TO PUT N. Y. TO BED AT 3 A. M.

Ginger Ale Service Looks as if It Will Be a Moist Time in Gotham

New York, Dec. 31—Predicting a noisier, more boisterous welcome for 1930 than has been enjoyed by any of its recent predecessors, hotel and restaurant managements today prepared to entertain thousands of New Year Eve celebrants.

Police Commissioner Whalen announced the curfew will drown out the blare of jazz, tin horns and other noise makers in night clubs promptly at 3 a. m. Wednesday. Hotels, which are immune from curfew restrictions, advertised dancing until dawn.

Speaking of noise, a large department store today opened a special department catering to those who believe in cruelty to eardrums.

These were horns to be operated by electricity, drums to beat with golf sticks and other contrivances which would make the battle of the Marne sound like a rumor.

The hotels reported capacity business for tonight, the charge including dinner and souvenirs, ranging from $10 to $20. Many organizations were giving "parties" in hotel ballrooms.

ROBOT FOR BELL HOP.

The Governor Clinton Hotel set aside to the entertainment of its New Year's Eve guests with an imported mechanical bell hop. The Robot will act as master of ceremonies.

The dwindling night clubs will come into their own for at least one night. Prices run from $5 a plate at the little fellows to $50 and $50 a plate at the elite joints.

Due perhaps to the government's new enforcement policy of "say it with bullets," or perhaps on account of the holiday demand, the prices of booze took a sudden jump today.

The management of the Hotel Ambassador announced that the generally moderate priced dining rooms would be taxed with reservations for more than 1000. The Persian Room and Cafe de Paris are on equal number, and other hotels and restaurants announced preparations for capacity crowds.

CHIMES ON AT 7.

Radio listeners may hear the New York church chimes as early as 7 p. m. Eastern Standard time. Tonight when, because of the difference in time, it will be midnight in London and the peals of Big Ben, famous clock in the tower of Parliament building, will be radiated across the Atlantic and broadcast throughout this country.

Other New Year's eve radio programs will include a series of concerts by bands playing from New York, Chicago, Denver, San Francisco and Sydney, Australia.

Watch services will be conducted by churches throughout the city, with many offering special music.

Chicago, Set for Wet New Year's, May Be Fooled

Chicago, Dec. 31 (AP)—There were those who said tonight's celebration of New Years eve in Chicago would be the driest in history, and there were others who said it would be very alcoholic.

At least one large hop held in the Palmer House announced its main dining rooms would be closed for the evening. Other places plan to permit no setups of cracked ice and ginger ale, although some of them will sell ginger ale alone.

An estimated 20,000 reservations have been made at the principal one-dance places.

42 Pairs of Sox Land Him in Cell.

Two pints of liquor against 42 pairs of sox is a poor ratio, Judge Murray decided in municipal court today in sentencing John P. Sullivan, 20, of Bennington st., East Boston, to six months in the House of Correction. Sullivan appealed the sentence and was held in $1000.

He was arrested by Patrolmen Gannon and Chalmers after they stopped him with his large bundle in Hanover st., North End. He said he had been given the sox to swap for two pints of liquor.

FLYING PLANT LOCATES IN BEVERLY

By GEORGE HAMBLIN

The newest commercial flying company in these parts, boasting the name North Shore Airways, is being launched, according to Bob Bernson, who will be general manager of the company.

Bernson has been actively connected with aviation for over a year and has investigated the whole business from beginning to end, coming to the conclusion that there is a definite place for a wide-awake, up-to-date flying company on the North Shore.

Hence, Beverly Airport will be the site used by the company for operations, in conjunction with the Beverly Aero Club, which has a lease on the field.

Unlike most airplane companies when they come into being, two lines of planes are already signed up, and the rest of the winter will be spent in drawing up complete plans for operation, and getting the ships set for the big spring opening.

Arrow Sport planes, carrying two people side-by-side, and powered with 60-horsepower LeBlonde engines and Buhl Airedans, cabin biplanes, seating four passengers and pilot and powered with 220 Whirlwinds are already in the possession of the company. As the business gets underway, higher powered Arrows, called the "Pursuit," and having a 100-horsepower Kinner engine in the nose, will be added to the company's roster of ships.

According to Bernson, the new Buhl Airedans coming out are the world's best, using the new Wright J-6 series motors, up to and including the 300-horsepower model, and as soon as the need is felt, a larger ship of this type will be purchased.

"Beverly Airport," said Bernson, "is ideally situated for a commercial flying company, having all the summer trade to draw from, and possessing excellent chances to be of service to the summer visitors to points north of Boston."

HALSTEAD AS PILOT

"I understand," continued Bernson, "that plans are under way to enlarge the airport in Revere, and when this is done, plenty of runway space will be available for the largest airplane now flying around this part of the country."

In forming the North Shore Airways, we will attempt to offer a new class of service to the flying public, and with that in mind, have, as the first step, engaged Lyle "Slim" Halstead to be our chief pilot. Halstead is now on his way south for the next couple of months, but will be back in time for the spring opening, tentatively set for the first of March."

Knowing Bernson as we do, we are sure that this new company will click from the start, and that the rest of the commercial operators around this part of the country will join us in welcoming Bob to the ever-growing list of outfits surveying safe, and commercial flying to the public.

BROCE'S LITTLE JOKE

Amid all the impressive ceremonies at the airport in connection with the dedication of the Administration building, Tom Broce pulled the fastest one we have seen in a long time.

Nearly a year ago, Tom painted "Curley for Mayor" on the underneath side of one of his bottom wings, and has flown the ship thus foiled up ever since.

Some one of the official speakers was orating during the dedicatory exercises, when the pop-pop of Broce's motor was heard overhead. Tom jazzed the throttle to attract attention, and when everybody looked up, here was the above-mentioned sign staring them right in the face. No wonder a ripple of laughter swept through the assembled throng.

Seldom has this town seen so many airplanes flying overhead at the same time, as there were when the aerial parade was pulled off. And seldom, if ever, in the past, have some 20 airplanes, of all types and makes, been flown off the airport at a public ceremony without even the slightest sign of an accident.

Airport Supt. Albert "Eddie" Edson, when we remarked about this unusual feature, stated: "Well, boys are using better airplanes with better motors, and are flying more safely and surely every day."

Is She Mrs. or a Miss?

JACK KEARNS WILL FIGHT 'WIFE'S' SUIT

New York, Dec. 31—Whether the lady known on Broadway and its environs as Mrs. Jack Kearns is really the legal wife of the sports promoter was a moot question today.

In an affidavit submitted in City Court Justice Lippe, Kearns declared she is really Miss Edith Angel and he added:

"She is not and never was my wife."

But against this sworn statement, Mrs. Kearns—to give her the benefit of any possible doubt, presented another sworn statement made by the promoter, who is ill in California, asserting that she was his wife, in name and fact.

In other documents submitted to the court, Kearns refers to her as Legna Kearns, and Legna is no more or less than Angel—reversed.

The fair plaintiff is suing to establish the legality of a contract by which Kearns agreed to pay her $500 a month for life.

On the other hand, the former manager of Jack Dempsey declares that he was forced to sign the contract by threats of the woman and her attorneys.

Plan to Record All American Dialects

Cleveland, Dec. 31 (AP)—American conversation with the dropping of "r's" in Georgia, its "heids" for "birds" in the East and other characteristics that differ with geographic location will be a matter of permanent record if a plan of the Modern Language Association of America is carried through.

According to Hans Kurath of Ohio State University, attending the 46th annual convention of the association here today, the chief language characteristics of all districts in the United States and Canada will be placed on monographs and charted on between 2000 and 3000 maps. More than 10,000 phonograph records of the different language characteristics will be made.

It is estimated that the cost will be between $750,000 and $1,000,000. The survey will be carried on by the American Council of Learned Societies, and the council would raise the money by endowment. The plans for the survey have been worked out with great care by the language association.

The project, Kurath estimated, would take 25 to 50 field workers two years for its completion. They will go into different sections of the continent and seek out the persons who speak most characteristically of that section.

The field workers will take notes of the various pronunciations and phrases. They will have a story read into the phonograph records and then have the people in these sections tell stories of their own.

$25,000 Legacy for Brookline Man

New York, Dec. 31—To a cousin cemetery in Hartsdale, N. Y., where several Irish spaniels that she owned at various times are buried, Mrs. Pauline Friedhuber Segree, deceased wealthy widow, left $400 in trust, according to the terms of her will.

William Bachrach of Brookline, Mass., a nephew, is given $25,000 in the will.

Man and Wife Dead in Card Game Row

Chicago, Dec. 31—Card playing has broken up many families, but this one ended two lives. Walter L. Smith of Indiana Harbor came home from work and found his wife "out playing cards." That night neighbors broke up a family fight which sent Mrs. Smith to the hospital.

Later Smith was found dead in the house and Mrs. Smith died today.

PASADENA, Cal., Dec. 31 (AP).—College football's capital, shifted to the far-Southwestern section of the country, hummed with activity today as the undefeated Pittsburgh Panthers and Southern California Trojans romped through final workouts preliminary to the intersectional match that will bring these powerful Eastern and Western rivals together New Year's day.

Not since 1924, when Stanford and Notre Dame shared the annual Tournament of Roses plum, has a forthcoming contest so caught the fancy of the football faithful.

The rose bowl, seating about 50,000 persons, has been sold out for weeks. It is the first time in five years that tickets have been placed at a premium where scalpers have been able to mobilize their forces.

Thirty-three strong, the Pittsburgh warriors reached the scene of combat Monday and dug their cleats into the same turf where five years ago they lost to Stanford 76.

Lighter than the Trojans, the Pitt boys nevertheless impressed onlookers with their thoroughness. Dash and pep was woven into every move of the invading touchdown-seekers.

Rather cool weather brought a smile from Coach Sutherland. It will add jack-rabbit if the sun takes a vacation until after the first of the year.

Each team planned light workouts today, Southern California in the morning and Pittsburgh in the afternoon.

50,000 TO SEE EAST-WEST GO

San Francisco, Dec. 31 (AP).—Tentative starting lineups were announced today for the all-star football game which will clash here tomorrow in the fifth annual East-West classic. An attendance of more than 50,000 persons is expected at the game.

Coaches Andy Kerr and Dick Hanley of the Eastern team announced their probable starting lineup as follows:

Ends, Bascom, Dartmouth, and Tanner, Minnesota.

Tackle, Ziegler, Purdue, and Temple, Notre Dame.

Guards, Cannon, Notre Dame, and Gordon, Illinois.

Center, Rodriguez, Northwestern.

Quarterback, Peters, Illinois.

Halfbacks, Bartel, Detroit, and Clasgow, Iowa.

Fullback, Naguski, Minnesota.

Coach Percy Locey announced his tentative starting lineup for the Western team as follows:

Ends, Holmgren, Whitman, and Churchill, Oklahoma.

Tackles, Schwartz, California, and Rumbelow, Texas Christian.

Center, Seghetti, St. Mary's.

Quarterback, Hutchins, Gonzaga.

Halfbacks, Gluch, Colorado College, and Sloan, Nebraska.

Fullback, Pomeroy, Utah.

The two coaches of the Eastern players have conceded the Western team the advantage in kicking, while the outstanding Eastern players make the odds on the outcome of the contest about even.

Last year the East defeated the West by a score of 20 to 0. The game is held annually and the proceeds go to the Shriners' Hospital fund for crippled children.

Salem Grid Squad Greeted by 5000

The Salem high football squad received home after a 2-day train trip from Philadelphia by a big welcoming committee. A crowd of 5000 Salemites greeted the squad with cheering led fire and speeches.

Mayor George Bates, who accompanied the squad in the Southland, was the principal speaker and commended the conduct and sportsmanship of the players. Each member of the squad was introduced to the crowd and cheered the echo.

MR. BOSTON

by JACK CONWAY

Jack Conway

"NEW YORK boxing writers have decided that Tuffy Griffiths would be only a 3-1 to 1 shot if pitted against Jack Sharkey," said Mr. Boston. "They still remember that it was only a short time ago when the same Tuffy was flattened in two heats by Jimmy Braddock.

"Braddock in turn was outclassed by Tommy Loughran, who was later knocked out in three rounds by Sharkey. By this reasoning the New York writers have agreed that the Boston heavyweight would be a 34 to 1 shot to win if Griffiths should be named as the party of the second part for the Battle of the Palms.

"Griffiths only standing in due to the fact that he outgalloped Johnny Risko in an ordinary mauling match. During the past 14 months Risko has been knocked out by Max Schmeling and has lost decisions to Jim Maloney, Ernie Schaaf, George Cook, Emmet Rocco and Kayo Christner. This record does not make Risko look very hot.

"Griffiths also happens to be one of the numerous light heavyweights who got a notion into his head that he could star as a heavyweight. This thought came to him even after he had been bounced off the canvas by Brad dock.

"THE history of other light heavyweights who have attempted to lick Sharkey more that no good little man has even an outside chance against the Boston warrior. Jack knocked out Loughran, Delaney and McTigue and crushed Gibbons.

"It takes a full-fledged heavyweight to give opposition to a high grade warrior like Sharkey. The boxing public has witnessed enough setups without handing them another under the tropical sun of Florida.

"Sharkey should at least be pitted against a man who is his physical equal. We still stick to the thought that when it comes to ring ability Sharkey has it all over every heavyweight in the world. And I'm not barring Tunney or Dempsey either.

"GUS SONNENBERG will be obliged to employ a special secretary to keep track of the numerous record offers he is receiving for his services. A few weeks ago Joe Coffee, out in Chicago, offered a $200,000 purse for Gus to battle the winner of a heavyweight tournament he plans to run under the direction of the Illinois Athletic Commission.

"I understand Sonnenberg accepted Coffee's offer.

"Now Bill Avery, who has been promoting shows at Mechanics Building, offers to give Gus an additional $50,000.

"None of the recent wrestling offers have been below $25,000. I know a great many plain folks who would like to know what the wrestling promoters use for money.

"Anyhow, I suppose it all keeps the wrestling pot boiling. This condition means plenty of work for a large number of healthy young men who have a great deal of spare time on their hands.

"I understand that Sonnenberg has earned more than $300,000 since January 1. That is no compensation for a young man who passed up a job selling automobiles to crash his rivals under flying tackles. I know a great many former college men who are Sonny's intellectual superiors but none of them can knock the opposition dizzy on the mat.

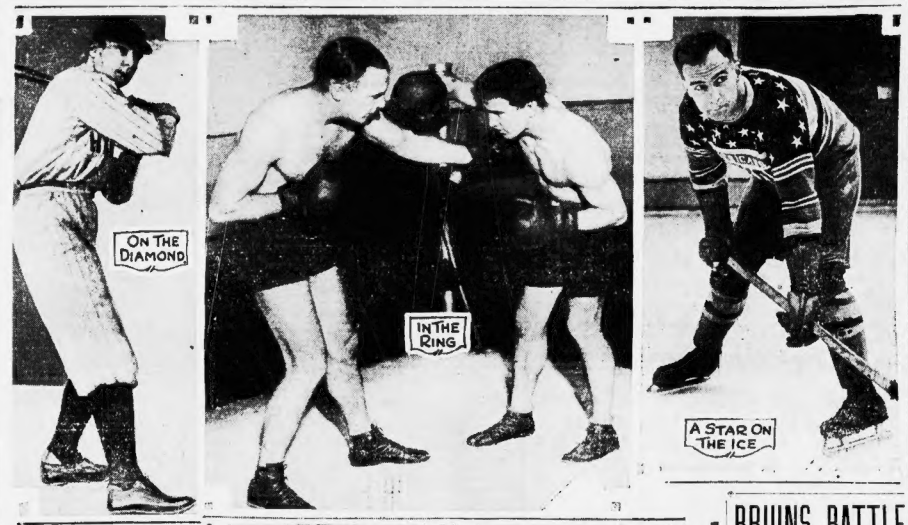
"Gus Sonnenberg can stay at the numerous million dollar offers. I wish he would sign to wrestle Bibber McCoy. The latter doesn't claim to be a champion of even one state, but he is, nevertheless, a mighty capable citizen when battling on the mat.

Cohasset Quintet Downs Weymouth

Cohasset, Dec. 31.—The Cohasset Catholic Club basketball team chalked up its sixth straight victory of the year by defeating Weymouth Catholic Outing Club, 43 to 24, at Union Hall here.

Bob Lannigan, playing his last game for the local club, was the high scorer with 24 points.

A SPORT FOR EVERY SEASON FOR N. Y. HOCKEY TEAM BOSS



Lionel Conacher, manager-player of the New York Americans, has a sport for each season of the year. Conacher is a good baseball player, a capable boxer, rugged wrestler and a star at lacrosse, one of the roughest games of them all. Conacher is working his New York Americans hard this year and hopes to send them to a win over the Bruins in Hub Garden tomorrow night. (Photos by International Newsreel.)

RULES O. K., SAY GRID COACHES

New York, Dec. 31.—Reggie Brown, B. U. football coach, made a motion at the meeting of the American Football Coaches' Association here that there be no rule changes recommended to the grid rules committee. The motion was duly seconded and put through by the members.

Glenn Thistlewaite, Wisconsin coach, recommended that the try for point after touchdown be abolished. Several other coaches had ideas for changing the grid rules in one way or another, but these suggestions were made more in a spirit of debate than with any intention actually of asking that the rules be altered.

The fumble rule, which provides that a fumbled ball is dead at the point of recovery, was mentioned but little, although when it was put into the rules there was widespread discussion as to its merits and demerits.

Election of officers of the association for the coming year was held. W. A. Alexander of Georgia Tech was elected president; Chick Meehan of N. Y. U., vice-president; Dr. Spears of Minnesota, second vice-president; W. H. Cowell of New Hampshire, secretary-treasurer.

Board of trustees for 1930 are: Francis Schmidt of Texas Christian, Potsy Clark of Butler and Dan McGugin of Vanderbilt.

Plan to Reorganize Olympic Committee

New York, Dec. 31 (INS).—Plans to reorganize the American Olympic committee to bring it up to date were suggested here.

At a joint meeting of committees from the American Olympic Association and the National Collegiate Association, four major recommendations were proposed.

In addition to splitting the membership into two classes, the committees suggested formation of an executive committee with power to form and organize in all particulars an American Olympic committee which shall have jurisdiction of all matters pertaining to the participation of the United States in the Olympic games.

This executive committee would then appoint a selection committee empowered to determine finally the competitors to represent the United States.

It also would select with "greater care" the managers, coaches, assistant coaches, trainers and game officials, distributing the appointments so that "adequate and democratic representation as well as proper and regional distribution shall result."

Pete Bostwick Best of Amateur Riders

George "Pete" Bostwick was the best of the amateur riders this year, but he was a long way behind the best professionals as his finish on Ruler in the Grand National proved conclusively.

Dartmouth Sextet Swamped by Toronto

Toronto University hockey team continued its victorious tour of the United States by walloping Dartmouth, 11 to 3, in the Garden.

Mel Harley, Toronto right winger led the attack with three goals and two assists. Burce Paul defenseman, got three.

Dave Marshall got two and Jimmy McMullen two more and an assist in addition. Whitehead collected after a stylish run down the ice.

Wild Bill Morton, quarterback of the recent Green football team, Ed Jeremiah and Vic Rockhill scored for Dartmouth.

Former U. S. Champ in Pinehurst Final

Pinehurst, N. C., Dec. 31.—William C. Fownes, Jr., of Oakmont, winner of the national amateur championship 19 years ago will face George T. Dunlap, Jr., of New York, unsalted and defending title holder in the final of the 25th annual mid-winter tournament over the No. 2 course here today.

Dunlap, a Princeton junior, has a chance to win the title for the fifth successive time.

Fownes eliminated another of the college players when he defeated Walter M. Scope of Philadelphia, a member of the Yale golf team, by 3 and 2.

Americans Spares—Heise, Conacher, Burmister, D. Measorve, Boyd, Holmes, Paterson, Spring.

Faceoff at 8:30 p. m.

Three 20-minute periods.

The Bruins having ended the old year with 10 straight victories, will endeavor to start the new year at the Garden tomorrow night in the same winning way.

It was just a year ago tomorrow night that the Bruins started their great spurt which carried them to a world championship and sent them through the month of January undefeated.

The New York Americans, the same team practically which the Bruins could not defeat or even score upon on Boston ice a year ago, proved the opposition.

The New Yorkers defeated Pittsburgh on Sunday night, 3-1, and are playing much better hockey under the amended National League rules than when forward passing was unrestricted in the attacking zone.

AMERICANS DANGEROUS

Americans in any game where there is a chance to play tight hockey and take advantage of the breaks will be dangerous. The Bruins, acting under orders, will go out from the first bell tomorrow night to pound Roy Worters in the Americans nets.

Worters has been a jinx in past seasons for the Bruins but this year the spell was broken and Bruins whipped eight goals by him while the Americans were scoring four, about two weeks ago in New York.

The visitors bring a team the personnel of which is well known in Boston. Norman Himes is a smart center and a good first line forward. Johnny Sheppard was a player the Bruins once sought from Detroit, a smart left winger.

He probably would be wearing a Bruins uniform today, had he not scored two goals in the dying minutes of Detroit-Bruins game here causing the Cougar management to change its mind about selling him. Rabbit McVeigh, who went to New York by way of Chicago, is another player who has done well on Boston ice.

STRONG DEFENSE

For a defense the Americans will show Leo Reise, Bullet Joe Simpson, Bill Brydge, formerly of Detroit, and Lionel Conacher, who in his younger days was the greatest of all amateur hockey players and who has performed as well as a professional, though his play has been offered by his managerial responsibilities in New York.

And in goal Americans have the brilliant Roy Worters, a year ago regarded the greatest goalie in the league, but whose honors since have been taken from him by Tiny Thompson of the Bruins.

The Bruins, for all the fact they have been playing steady winning hockey, do not show any sign of strain.

Game starts at 8:30.

SPRINGFIELD INDIANS, the Canadian-American League club which has given the Tigers trouble throughout the season, come back to the Garden tonight for the fourth game of their season's series with the Bengals.

The Indians have won the two games previously played at the Garden, and gave the Tigers a real argument before succumbing, 3 to 4, in overtime.

The Garden has joined the Tigers off person, but the players are determined to see the old year out in proper style at the Indians expense tonight.

TIGERS MAD

The team is fighting mad, for the players are convinced that they lost the Providence game of Saturday because of bad breaks.

They swarmed in on the Red goal for two periods and, despite a dozen or more open chances, were able to beat Mickey Murray only twice.

Notwithstanding this, and other reverses of the immediate past, the team has outscored its nearest competitor by 12 goals, with Deacon White and Yank Boyd leading the parade.

These two and Johnny Loucks, who holds the doubtful distinction of having served more time in the penalty box than any other player in the league, will be on the starting forward line, with Reg Mackey and Eddie Oatman at the points and Herb Reaume in goal.

MILES ON SECOND LINE

Reg Mills will play center on the second line. He has been going much better in this game than he did right wing in early season.

Eddie Burke will be in the right lane and Clark Boyd, who is starting to travel, will be in the left.

Now that Penny Conant is back in action the Tigers have an attact relief defense. He and Bill Regan will be used as a unit in relief.

Springfield is stronger than it was the last time it came to Boston, having acquired Leo Quennville, left winngman, from the New York Rangers. Manager Frank Carroll has been using Quennville to relieve Cecil Dillon at left wing.

Gene Carrigan, former California league player, will be at center on the first line. He is one of the league's high scorers and he and Dillon have been making trouble in combination all season.

Bud Marsch, the genuine Indian, who has been relieving Carrigan, probably will not play in Boston. He has a bad ankle.

The Indian defense, completing Pat Culligher and Everet McGowan at the points and Ernie Lamoutagne in goal, is one of the most able in the league.

No B. C. Entries in Brooklyn Meet

Due to the lapse in training during the Christmas holidays, Coach Jack Ryder announces that Boston College will not be represented in the first big indoor meet of the winter season, the Brooklyn Knights of Columbus games, in New York next Saturday night.

Ryder intended to send a Boston College relay team to Gotham, but has changed his mind, because he feels that he can't muster an E. gle quartet well enough conditioned to make a creditable showing.

Jack states that Boston College's first big entry of the winter will be at the local Knights of Columbus games, which will be held here on January 25.

Stasiak in Mat Fray With Stecher at Boston Arena

M'COY MEETS FRANK YUSKO TOMORROW

A "HERO" will collide with a "villain" when Joe Stecher, ex-heavyweight champion wrestler of the world, goes to war with Stanley Stasiak, the Lion of Poland, in a finish match on Paul Bowser's great all-star mat show in the Boston Arena tomorrow night.

Stecher always has been idolized by boys everywhere. Youngsters in numbers may be found inside and outside of every arena where he wrestles, and many a time he has befriended his young admirers, with Stasiak it is a far different story.

Stanley is a rough and rugged warrior of the type that most folks would rather see defeated than to win. Stasiak trains every day at Brand's gymnasium from 2 to 3, and the question paramount in the minds of fans of the Hub at the present moment is, "can a 'hero' wrestler down a 'villain' supplies the answer will come tomorrow night after the smoke of battle clears away on Paul Bowser's mat-pushing party. Two out of three falls will decide the issue.

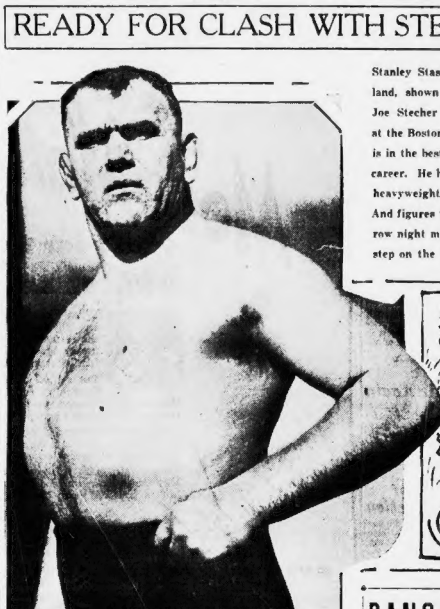
BOB "Bibber" McCoy again will put his bag of mat tricks and grips on display tomorrow night, when going against a mighty formidable opponent in meeting the star Lithuanian, Frank Yusko, he brilliant Cambridge matman, hopes to toss Yusko aside from his midway up the wrestling ladder to the Lithuanian has plans of his own that might upset those of McCoy.

The popular and sensational mark champion, George Kotsonaros, has signed to tangle with Eddie Meyers, the spectacular screw man-mauler, in one of the three bouts to be dished up for the spectators. With such an attractive card arranged and the ice removed from the Arena, fans are expected to be on hand in numbers to witness tomorrow night's hostilities. The first match begins at promptly 8:15.

Ed George, sensational national champion, will meet Frank Delano in another bout on the card. George has shown real class in the past few months here and a few more wins will put him away at in front.

Dan Koloff, Bulgarian giant, will meet Count Zaryoff, the Ukrainian champion, in still another bout on the card.

READY FOR CLASH WITH STECHER



Stanley Stasiak, Lion of Poland, shown above, wrestles Joe Stecher tomorrow night at the Boston Arena. Stasiak is in the best condition of his career. He has his eye on the heavyweight mat title now. And figures that a win tomorrow night means the first big step on the title trail.

$50,000 OFFER TO SONNY FOR TITLE GO

Billy Avery, the Mechanics Building wrestling impresario, today announced the offer of a purse of $100,000, the largest in the history of the grappling game, for a Dick Shikat-Gus Sonnenberg heavyweight title match to take place in Boston within a period of 90 days.

Avery stated that he had already guaranteed and signed Joe "Toots" Mondt, manager of Shikat, the recognized champion in New York and Pennsylvania, to a contract calling for $50,000, and that he was today forwarding the same proposition to Sonnenberg's manager.

Avery declares he will give Sonnenberg $10,000 the minute the former Dartmouth athlete affixes his signature to a contract and the balance 48 hours before the match.

"If Sonnenberg is the great wrestler his handlers declare him to be my offer, which I consider amazing, should be accepted," said Avery. "Shikat is the rightful champion in my estimation, but the only way to prove this to the fans of Boston and vicinity is for him to meet Sonnenberg. He is willing and I don't see why Sonnenberg should not. Fifty thousand dollars is more money than Sonnenberg has ever received for any two matches.

"This heavyweight situation must be cleaned up. Sonnenberg's handlers are saying that Shikat should first beat such men as Koloff and Stasiak.

"I intend to give Sonnenberg 30 days to accept or decline my offer. If Gus is willing to go through with the match, I'll insist that it be staged in Boston within a period of 90 days. Mr. Mondt, the manager of Shikat, signed the necessary articles after considerable wrangling late Saturday night."

BANQUET FOR B. C. GRIDMEN

The football warriors of Boston College, victorious over Holy Cross on the frozen turf of Fenway Park last month, will be banqueted at the Hotel Commander, Cambridge, on January 8, according to present plans.

James Regan and Paul Mahoney, Student A. A. president and manager of the football team, respectively, have been working on preparations.

Rev. Fr. Roddy and Coach McKenney are in New York at present attending the football meeting, and the date and place are subject to their approval upon return.

This year's football fete to the Boston College team is a direct departure from custom. Only the football players of the varsity and freshman squads, a few newspaper men and others, such as trainers, doctors and managers have been invited.

The usual after-dinner speaking will be dispensed with, although some of the players and the coaches will more than likely be called upon.

In former years the banquet, which is held win or lose, has been sponsored by the alumni of Boston College and open to all B. C. followers who cared to go. No reason for the departure from this system has been given other than that B. C. officials plan to reward the athletes by a quiet, conservative fete.

Captain Paddy Creedon, Joe Mirley, Pete Herman and Charley Murphy, star seniors who played star roles in Boston College's successful campaign of 1929, will be the guests of honor.

John Dixon, the long Norwood boy who will lead the Eagles next fall, will also be honored. Dixie was the most prominent of all the Boston College footballers in All-American selections. He was chosen on the Boston Evening American "All" team and would have been one of the leading selections in the East had he been with a more prominent team.

The 31 players who won their letters by facing Holy Cross will be awarded gold footballs with jeweled "B's" and the names and years of the Holy Cross game inscribed thereon.

HARVARD SIX IN LONG WORKOUT

Harvard's hockey sextet saw 1929 out with a long practice session in the Garden today. The icemen, returning to Boston from various sections of the East seemed in good shape after their hard tilt with Toronto last Saturday in New York.

Charlie Dakin, first string Harvard wing, worked with Elliot Putnam and Johnny Cross on John's forward trio. Lakin, from all indications will be in the starting line-up when Harvard meets Toronto in a return game at the Garden Thursday.

Harvard is anxious to wipe out the defeat which Toronto handed it in New York. The squad drilled hard and hard today developing a strong attack.

CRIMSON MUST STEP

The players feel that playing on their home ice ought to help them a lot in downing the visiting Canadians. On the other hand, all ice is the same to the fast skating Toronto six, and Harvard will have to show better work than it did in New York to beat its guests from the North.

Many Harvard fans would like to see Johnny Harrison back in his old spot at right wing. Garrison's speed and stick work has largely been lost in his present position on the defense.

Harrison has done almost as much carrying of the puck inside the opposing blue line as his team mate, Lakin. Lakin, Cross, Wood and Stubbs. At the same time, lacking Johnny in the Harvard defense would be a serious drawback to Harvard's game.

GARRISON GOOD

Teaming with Sam Ratchelder, Garrison helps make an airtight defense for Goalie Hardy Ellis. Both defense players are rugged and can body check.

Harvard meets another tough opponent on January 8, when Michigan Tech comes to town. Michigan will oppose Yale and Princeton as well as Harvard, and in addition it plays all the Big Ten in the Mid-Western Conference League.

Michigan is said to be fond of the Canadian style of hockey, playing a wide open game with everyone shooting but the goal tender. The team is composed almost entirely of veterans who played through an unbeaten season a year ago.

Between Toronto and Michigan, Harvard will sandwich in a game with M. I. T. on January 6. The Engineers have been improving steadily since last year's game with B. U., and may give Harvard a difficult evening.

Hockey Officials Must Be Without Fear

By BILL GRIMES

AT this time, a rehash of the Seibert and Trottier vs. Shore melee is appropriate, as the Bruins and the Maroons are scheduled to play their final game of the season in the Montreal Forum, which was the scene of that despicable assault, next Saturday night.

Since the Bruins and the Maroons entered the National Hockey League back in 1924, there has always been bad blood in evidence whenever these teams have opposed each other.

Bill Grimes

They play the same style of hockey, the hard checking variety which develops grievances that have been carried over from year to year.

Eddie Shore has been a star in the N. H. L. since he joined the Bruins. He is big and rugged and a dynamo in action. He is the bulling type of player who never fails to leave his mark in crashing through a defense.

He is regarded as one of the bad men of hockey, but with the exception of the Bill Brydge incident a year ago, it is questionable as to whether he has been more sinning than sinned against. Like all players of his type, Shore has lost his head at times and committed assaults upon opponents, which failed to promote his standing among the fans.

DOUBTLESS less criticism would have been heaped upon Shore were he undersized instead of a giant. The big fellows are natural prey for the followers of any sport, while the little players are regarded as favorites for arousing the things for which the bigger players are censored.

Last night Eddie Shore had gone on a few rampages last season, rumors that he was to be "put on the spot," to use the vernacular of the underworld, became prevalent. Although it may be hard to hold any brief for Shore, it must be admitted that the giant Bruin defense man has taken his bumps without a whimper or protest.

There are many different versions to the Shore assault in Montreal last November. Hockey is so fast that few spectators can agree on even the simplest plays. There is little doubt, however, that there is a wide variety of opinion as to how Shore was mowed down in the Forum.

UNBIASED fans of Montreal agree that Siebert's attack on Shore was the most brutal thing had seen in years. They claim that Siebert rumbled and deliberately crossed Eddie's path.

Some qualify their statements by saying that Shore had just tried to put Siebert in the "discard," but, at the same time, they refuse to excuse the Maroon player for his action. Also, they admit that Trottier, who is notorious for carrying a high stick, was equally as guilty as Siebert, although less successful in carrying out his intention.

One thing they all agreed upon was that Siebert and Trottier should have been penalized for their actions. The assault upon Shore brought forth considerable criticism against Siebert and Trottier, but the fair-minded fans, while assigning two practically unsportsmanlike players to handle the game.

Undoubtedly there would have been no serious outbreak in that game if competent referees were in charge. George Hallinan was exonerated from all blame, for he had gone down the ice with the play and did not see the assault. On the other hand, it is claimed that Leo Heffernan, who was working with Mallinson, was in a position to see Siebert and Trottier drop Shore.

The fact that Mallinson and Heffernan both are residents of Montreal, a city where they take their hockey as seriously as they do their politics, did not help matters. Refereeing in Montreal is a severe test on the courage of any official.

If the fans "thumb down" a referee in the Forum that official is through. Mallinson had the privilege of approval from the Montreal fans is the deciding factor as to his being an official. And, they bear in mind, that the fans in the Canadian metropolis do not look with favor upon penalties inflicted upon home players.

AS HE was in Toronto and did not see the assault and as the officials had not penalized either Siebert or Trottier, Pres. Calder refused to take any action when demands for Siebert's suspension were made.

He stated that the accounts of the assault were greatly exaggerated, according to the authorities he had interviewed, and added that the bone in Shore's nose was not broken and that there were no marks of a stick on the Bruin's nose.

However, the bone in Shore's nose was broken and broken in two places and there was a cut across the bridge of his nose. There are photographs to prove this contention.

By refusing to suspend Siebert, Pres. Calder stood behind officials. But he weakened his stand when he disparaged Leo Heffernan as a N. H. L. referee, for aside from the Siebert-Shore incident there is no cause for Heffernan's dismissal.

There is considerably more behind that failure of Calder to act on the Siebert case than appears on the surface, the detail of which will be made public in the near future.

It will be to the advantage of President Calder and the N. H. L. to see that next Saturday's game is handled by the most competent referees. The Maroons are fighting to hold their lead in the Canadian division but the Bruins are making a runaway of their race.

The Forum crowd expects trouble when the Bruins tackle their Maroon foes on Saturday and only officials with the courage of their convictions should be assigned to that game. Bobby Hewitson, Bert Corbeau, Odie Cleghorn and Cy Denneny are the type necessary to guarantee law and order when the Bruins and Maroons clash in the Forum on Saturday next.

Who will President Frank Calder assign to handle this hectic battle?

BILLY JACOBS IN NET FINALS

New York, Dec. 31 (AP)—Billy Jacobs of Baltimore City College reached the final round of the national junior indoor tennis championship today by defeating Aaron Miller of the Clifton Club, Baltimore, 6-0, 6-3.

Jacobs never was pressed and had the match well in hand throughout.

Jacobs, playing a smooth all-court game with no particular weakness, won as easily from his fellow countrymen that he is generally favored to defeat Richardson. Jacobs was placed at the top of the seeded list in advance of the tournament and his play has justified this rating.

Richardson was not even included among the seeded eight but flashed some of the cleverest volleying of the tournament in eliminating Seligson and Frame.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON

Another angle of automobile golf course improvement that will relieve the fairways of long and lighter ball, to go into effect the next year, is that the average golf course thereafter not have to speculate on the cost of additional land, assuming that it owns anything like 100 acres or more now, and we should see those par 4 holes of 350 odd yards disappear from the scene, although unless they become par 5's, as they no doubt will with the new ball. A par 4 of that length never was any good even with the present ball, because when the pro parred it he never demonstrated anything except his ability to squirt the present ball 200 yards or more off the wood, which shouldn't mean anything at all in real golf, while the duffer or member found in such a hole only a test of his good humor. He couldn't get there in par and never expected to, and he made in three and one it didn't mean anything because he felt it was a fluke at best.

BOXERS SET FOR GOLDEN GLOVE FINAL

LOCAL gymnasiums are thronged with amateur boxers these days, as the young men go through their final training paces in preparation for the New England Golden Glove tourney in Mechanics Building next Monday night.

As a result of four weeks of eliminations 32 of the best amateurs in this part of the world have been selected to compete. The list includes the names of every star amateur boxer in the state, and the tournament is expected to be the most sensational ever held here.

The four best 112-pounders in New England survived the competition among the little men. They are George Ostrow, hard-hitting little midget from Revere; Arthur Nadeau of Cambridge, Henry Burns of Somerville and Rene Fontaine of Southbridge, and the shade of LaBarba, probably the greatest amateur flyweight in history, will hover over the Mechanics Building ring when the little terriers swing into action.

The possibility of a meeting between Nadeau and Ostrow will help pack the Huntington ave. sports palace to the roof. They clashed in the finals at the recent international tourney and Nadeau stopped Ostrow's long winning streak when he received the decision after a bitter three-round battle. It is probable that they will clash once more, and each of the youngsters will be backed by hundreds of admirers.

Fontaine and Burns are of the same calibre as Nadeau and Ostrow. Many of the closest judges of boxing are keeping an eye on young Fontaine. They say that he is the class of the flyweights, and that he will scamper to victory over the other stars in the division.

GRIFFITHS BOUT OFFERED VICTOR

"Tuffy" Griffiths, the Iowa Thunderbolt and conqueror of Johnny Risko, may accept the offer of the Boston Garden to invade this city to meet the winners of the heavyweight eight-man tourney between Ernie Schaaf, punching Hub sailor, and Al Friedman of Roslindale, it developed today.

Although Griffiths is still hopeful of meeting Jack Sharkey at Miami in February, it is the opinion of the Garden that Griffiths will not prove a suitable opponent for Sharkey in the South and for this reason, "Tuffy" may be forced to come to the Hub.

Sharkey is opposed to meeting a Northern foe this spring, but he claims such a bout will not draw, and until this matter is definitely settled there remains the possibility that Griffiths may accept the Hub offer.

The heavyweight meeting between Schaaf and Friedman tops the opening card of the new year at the Garden on January 10. On this same card, Arthur "The Great Shrimp" Sprohrer will box. These two baseball stars who have waded into the boxing game will prove a drawing card that is certain to arouse the interest of the fans.

Both Schaaf and Friedman are eager to step into the ring with Griffiths. Each insists that he can beat the Iowan and this bout now looms up as one of the early New Year fixtures.

It has been definitely decided that Al Sprohrer will do all his training for his meeting with "Wharton" Shires at Ernie Schaaf's Wrentham training camp. This will keep the baseball star far from the prying eyes of the curious and will give him a good chance to get into the best possible condition. For Sprohrer wants to beat Shires if he never fights another glove in the ring.

Sprohrer sent word to the Hub yesterday that he hasn't the least doubt of his ability to knock Shires tongue-tied in this hour.

LAREDO URGES GOVERNOR TO OUST VALLS

Laredo, Tex., Dec. 31 (AP)—A resolution seeking removal from office of District Attorney John A. Valls will be sent to Governor Dan Moody today with the signature of 400 persons who adopted the measure at a mass meeting last night.

Valls' recent threat of arrest against Gen. Plutarco Elias Calles, former president of Mexico, was responsible for closing of the Mexican consulate here and the Mexican Federal Government has informed Laredo business men that the consulate will not be restored until Valls resigns or is removed from office. Valls sought to arrest Calles on a 3-year-old charge of conspiracy in the slaying of two Mexican army officers here, but was prevented by diplomatic immunity granted the former president.

The resolution, addressed to Governor Moody, requests the executive to ask Valls to resign. In event the district attorney refuses the resolution would have the governor remove him from office.

ONLY 3 DAYS TO GET ADJUSTED COMPENSATION

Washington, Dec. 31 (AP)—There are about 400,000 men and women in the United States who can get from Uncle Sam—for the mere asking—cash or a bit of paper worth from $1 to about $1600.

But these men and women, who are World War soldiers and sailors, marines and yeomanettes, must report at it before Thursday midnight, or forever hold their peace.

The adjusted compensation act of 1924 provided for payment of all veterans or their dependents in accordance with the service they gave. It guaranteed a monetary recompense to every man who served more than 60 days at home or in the trenches, and the only proviso it laid down was that requests be made to the branch in which the service was rendered—before January 3, 1930.

At the War Department, it was said today, between 300,000 and 400,000 veterans who are eligible to apply for compensation have not yet done so and must by midnight Thursday in order to receive the benefit. Navy veterans who yet may apply number 62,291 and marines 13,151.

TARR'S OFFICE LEADS IN RUM CONVICTIONS

More than 92 per cent of those taken into the federal courts in this district on charges of violating the liquor laws during 1928 were convicted either by plea or by trial, Asst. U. S. Atty. Elihu D. Stone announced today in a review of prohibition enforcement for the past year.

Less than 8 per cent escaped conviction, he asserted, and these include all persons acquitted by jury trial, fugitives from justice, defendants against whom indictments and search warrants were quashed, and cases not pressed.

"There is no promiscuous nol pressing here," Mr. Stone said. "In every instance I consult U. S. Atty. Frederick H. Tarr on cases which in my opinion should be not pressed, to secure his consent before taking such action.

"The record of liquor law convictions in this office is one of the best in the nation. In Suffolk County, for example, the average number of convictions is about 40 per cent.

"We have on file in this office the reason for not pressing in every liquor case where such action is taken."

Mr. Stone revealed that with few exceptions the only liquor law violations now awaiting disposition in the federal courts are those of recent date.

More Mothers each year treat COLDS without "DOSING"

When Vicks VapoRub was originated, mothers especially were quick to appreciate it because there is nothing to swallow, and, of course, nothing to upset children's delicate stomachs, as "dosing" is so apt to do.

Just rubbed on throat and chest, Vicks acts through the skin like a plaster; and, at the same time, its medicated vapors, released by the body heat, are inhaled direct to the inflamed air-passages.

Today, the whole trend of medical practice is away from needless "dosing," and Vicks is the standby for colds—adults' as well as children's—in over 60 countries.

To keep step with this ever-increasing demand, the famous Vick slogan has again been changed. There are now "Over 26 Million Jars Used Yearly" in the United States alone.

BACON ACTS TO GIVE CITIES AND TOWNS HOME RULE

Air Romance, Better Than "Chickie"

CHAPTER 49

A PLANE flashed across the canyons. It went swiftly—high and brilliant in its solitude. It began weaving bridges over the mighty gorges. Back and forth in endless silver arcs. As though it would not leave one stone in all the savage waste unspotted.

Since the first light of day, the plane had traversed those rocky cliffs. Their color made a gorgeous blaze in the pilot's mind. He leaned from the cockpit and thought with panic: "God, there's no end to them! A thousand of these chasms!" And in any one, a girl and a little boy could be eternally lost. Two months ago a plane crashed here; not a bone or splinter of ship or human was yet found.

But Guy flew low. He skimmed the stones in a fury of denial that Pat would ultimately elude him. She was here. Somewhere in the vast, labyrinthian gorges. From here she had called. He listened with heart and mind and soul as though Pat's spirit would now repeat that urgent cry—would draw him down to her.

Meanwhile Pat, huddled in the tunnel with the boy, was torn with fears. Would Guy come? Her mind flew back to college days and the bright dances she enjoyed so much. Would she ever see the outside world again?

An hour upon hour his desperate plane went on. Twice he flew back to Kingman in fruitless search, and twice saw in the blue distance other planes. They, too, were searching for Pat and the lost child. Wilbur Bryce would make it worth while—if any pilot who brought little grandson back to him. Volunteer ships by the score were lured by the huge rewards now posted. They raged to the canyons when the report of Pat's S O S was flashed. The whole bitter abyss would be combed. It MUST yield up the lost!

But noon came. The sun blazed. The wilderness beneath Guy lay in a still glaring quiet. Not a breathe, not a moving sign that life moved over ledge or floor.

At two o'clock he was in Kingman. The mechanic filled his tank to the brim. He loaded extra cans of gas in the cabin, grimly as he worked: "You won't have light but there much longer. Sun sets early now."

"Has any good word come in?" "No word of the girl."

"How many planes are searching?"

"Dozen or more. Say, that fellow Elliott broke jail in Frisco. Police want him. They're flying here on two planes. Bryce has sent three—passed here an hour ago. See them? Lucky fellow that picks off that reward. Good luck."

Guy climbed to the cockpit. He wiped dry, burning eyes. An hour to fly back, then an hour and a half, two hours at best of light remaining. And already nearly 48 hours were gone since Pat had called.

"But the canyons are but 200 miles in extent—She's there—somewhere within 200 miles—"

Again he looked down upon the unlimited, bewildering reaches—mountains sheer and gaunt climbing to the skies, gorges falling down to black, bottomless pits. The whole terrifying scene shocking him with its stark unfamiliarity. He did not even feel sure that he had touched this area before He circled desperately.

Now it was 3 o'clock—now 3:30, ominously the shadows began developing up from the abyss.

They moved with royal, fantastic

Boston Man Held in Theft of Auto

Robert E. Wallis, 24, of Bowdoin st., was held under bonds of $10,000 in the East Cambridge district court on charges of breaking, entering and larceny of an automobile from the Anderson Motor Co. of Arlington.

His arrest attracted the attention of Arlington police Saturday night when he was driving a car without plates. He was stopped and questioned. Further investigation showed that the Anderson sales room had been broken into and a car stolen.

Wallis was charged with having burglars' tools in his possession. He pleaded not guilty to all charges.

Motor Vehicles Registry Swamped With Rush for 1930 Automobile Plates

The last minute rush for new number plates was on in full force today as thousands rushed to Commonwealth pier for their 1930 plates. Picture shows the line waiting to get to the window. (Staff photos.)

Miss Dorothy Jones of Somerville got in line bright and early and there were plenty waiting to take her place when she left with her new numbers. Here she is putting them on with the aid of Officer Malloy.

'District Courthouse' Hit by Judge Stone

The third district courthouse in East Cambridge was today the described as "the dirtiest district court in Massachusetts and totally inadequate for its purpose."

Judge Arthur P. Stone, presiding justice of the court, made this charge at a conference between the Middlesex county commissioners and members of the Cambridge Bar Association on the question of rebuilding or remodeling the present quarters.

Judge Stone pointed out that four courts, instead of three, were absolutely necessary, with conference rooms for attorneys and clients, and more space for the clerk and probation officers.

It is sometimes necessary, said Judge Stone, to hold 10 court sessions in the building at one time, and the attending congestion greatly hampered the speedy administration of justice.

Former Representative Louis Green headed the Cambridge bar delegation. Attorney Patrick J. Delaney suggested the erection of a new courthouse at Third and Thorndike sts., where tenement property could be taken for the purpose.

Atty. Green said that to remodel the present quarters would cost in the neighborhood of $300,000, and he thought it would be more economical to ask the legislature to appropriate $600,00 for a new building.

The county commissioners took the matter under advisement and will decide whether to rebuild, or enlarge the present quarters.

HUB FOLK HURT IN BUS CRASH

Several Greater Boston persons were among seven passengers injured today when a Boston-to-New York bus skidded on a slippery pavement in Meriden, Ct.

The most seriously injured were Mrs. Lillian Smith, 60, Winchester; John Brown, 38, New York City, and Lamburtus Van Raayan, 32, Paterson, N. J.

The driver, Frederick H. Ling, of Arlington, and three others were treated at a hospital. Mrs. Annie E. Ling, wife of the driver, left for Meriden on learning of the accident.

Sec. Lamont Will Address Chamber

How the government censuses of distribution and manufacture may be utilized in the development of a scientific business program will be explained to New England business men Saturday by Secretary of Commerce Robert P. Lamont.

Secretary Lamont will be the principal speaker at a meeting at the Chamber of Commerce, the final gathering of a series held throughout the country in the interests of these censuses. Other speakers will be Col. L. R. Horney, Frederick M. Felker and Dr. Robert J. McFall.

The Gumstate hole problem is solved by taking a kitchenette apartment and the best are advertised daily in the Rent Wanted columns.

BOSTON WARM AS SOUTH

Bostonians enjoyed weather equal to that of the "Sunny South" today, temperatures being much above seasonal.

At 8 a. m. the temperature in Boston was 42 degrees and that at Jacksonville, Fla., at the same hour was only two degrees higher.

At noon the mercury rose to 48 in Boston, this being 8 degrees warmer than yesterday at the same hour.

Temperatures are also much above the seasonal average from the Great Lakes westward to the Rocky Mountains and beyond.

Although the slightly colder weather is forecast for Boston tonight it will be sufficiently moderate for the thousands of Bostonians who plan on making whoopee in greeting the New Year to do so without burdening themselves with heavy clothing.

Somerville Woman Recovers Pet Bird

Detective Sergt. Daniel M. O'Connell of Somerville today recovered a parakeet, pet of Mrs. Annie Gostonian of 16 Rhode Island ave., East Somerville, which escaped from her home two weeks ago.

Two girls had found the bird exhausted and gave him to a Somerville shoemaker, who, according to police, refused to return it to the owner.

Mrs. Gostonian then went to police headquarters and O'Connell was assigned to the case.

Awarded Divorce

Testimony that her husband William D. Shannahan of Marlboro struck her in the face on Christmas Day, 1925, and abused her at another time just after she returned from the funeral of an uncle, won a divorce for Mrs. Gladys L. Shannahan in Middlesex Probate Court at East Cambridge.

ROXBURY BOY IS SHOT IN SIDE

Alfred Dipallo, 12, of Chesterton st., Roxbury, narrowly escaped death today when a bullet fired from a 25-calibre automatic pistol buried itself in his left side.

According to the boy, he was shot by a companion, Nicholas Rio, 12, of Chesterton st., owner of the gun. Rio, however, although admitting ownership of the pistol, said it was held by Herbert Vasca, 12, of Watertown. After hearing the stories, police held Rio on a delinquency charge.

The boys were in a group of six playing in a vacant lot at Chesterton st. and Massachusetts ave., Roxbury.

When the pistol went off unexpectedly, young Dipallo fell writhing on the ground. He was taken to City Hospital where doctors said the wound was not serious.

Grounded Trawler Pulled Off Island

Grounding on Lovell's Island in Boston harbor at in wide early today, the steam trawler Boston College was floated without damage a few hours later. She then proceeded on a fishing trip to George's Bank.

The Boston College is owned by the A & P Fisheries and carries a crew of 14 men under Capt. Tony Magnusson. A lowboat and a coast guard patrol craft aided in pulling her from the shoals.

Truck Driver Freed of All Death Blame

Everett D. Elwin of Somerville was absolved today of all blame in connection with the death of Elsie Finkel of Revere st., West End, struck by his truck in Myrtle st. on Dec. 18.

He was recently found not guilty of manslaughter and in Municipal Court today was found not guilty of reckless driving. The court concluded Elwin was driving slowly when the victim ran in front of his truck.

Thousands in Rush for Auto Plates

The belated rush by motorists given out by nightfall, this number to obtain their 1930 license plates and registration swamped State registry officials today at Commonwealth Pier.

Early morning saw long lines of men and women formed outside the delivery windows and these lines increased in length as the day progressed.

Registrar George A. Parker estimated that 30,000 plates would be being 10,000 more than on Friday. It is also estimated that when the registry closes this evening a grand total of between 425,000 and 450,000 plates, or less than one-half of the state's registration, will have been distributed.

AUTOS BLOCK TRAFFIC

Throughout the day motor vehicles of every description jammed the bridge approach to the registry and a special detail of police was necessary to regulate traffic.

An unusual number of applications for "freak" numbers has been received this year, according to Registrar Parker.

The wife of a professor of mathematics at Massachusetts Institute of Technology requested the number 31416, which, with a decimal point after the first figure, represents the mathematical "Pi."

An exuberant poker player asked for a "straight" number, saying that he had won a big pot with a straight hand the night before and believed it would bring him luck throughout the year.

WANTS LOW NUMBER

A solicitous mother requested the registrar to give her a plate with a very low number, "so that my two young children can remember it easily."

The number of persons who requested numbers corresponding to their home addresses, telephone numbers, date and year of birth ran into hundreds.

"Needless to say," said Registrar Parker, "we have to refuse such requests. We have plenty to do to distribute the plates according to established routine."

All 1930 plates must be on cars by noon tomorrow. This year's plates may be used up to that hour, providing the motorist has 1930 registration.

"I would advise everyone to play safe and get their plates on before midnight tonight, especially those who contemplate celebrating the New Year after midnight," warned the registrar.

Gets Sentence Stay to Have New Year With His Wife

Because he wanted to spend New Year's Day with his wife, James Moriarty will not begin to serve until Monday a sentence of three months in the house of correction imposed upon him today in municipal court.

Seventeen witnesses appeared against him on charges of larceny involving $500 in merchandise from downtown stores by means of a bogus identification card.

Judge Michael J. Murray listened to 81 sobs for liberty until after New Year's Day and granted a stay of sentence until Monday.

Urges Control of All Gas Contracts

A bill giving the Public Utilities Commission control over contracts made by gas companies for supplies of that commodity was today filed with the legislature by Atty. Wycliffe C. Marshall of Watertown.

The bill would prohibit the companies from entering into contracts for the purchase of gas until after the department has approved the contract following a review and a determination after a public hearing.

FILES 9 BILLS TO ENFORCE PLAN

Legislature's Work Would Be Cut in Half, President of Senate Says

President Gaspar G. Bacon of the Senate, on his own petition, today filed nine bills with the Legislature directed chiefly towards the elimination of "log-rolling" and the restoration of home rule for cities and towns.

It is probably the first instance in which a presiding officer of the upper branch of the General Court has made himself the petitioner for enactments on such a drastic scale.

Should the Bacon program go through as outlined, the work of the Legislature, it is confidently predicted, will be cut in half.

To use Bacon's own words, it will "relieve the cities and towns of the everlasting necessity of beating a path to the State House for the right to do this, that and the other thing, not to mention the relief with which the Legislature would thereby be blessed, and keep off the books some of the yearly clutter of special acts."

LIST OF PROPOSALS

Here are the things that President Bacon proposes:

Allow municipalities to borrow in excess of the present limits of indebtedness when approved on a referendum.

Authorize municipalities to make appropriations for public entertainments in connection with annual conventions of veterans' organizations.

Empower the commissioner of corporations and taxation to revive corporations.

Require counsel for the Legislature and department heads and officials to make annual recommendations for changes that will avoid special legislation by enactment of general legislation.

CAUSE OF OPPROBRIUM

President Bacon pointed out that of the 443 acts and resolves passed at the 1929 session of the Legislature, 212 were of special application. The ratio from year to year, he added, was about the same.

He charged that much of the opprobrium that has been heaped upon the Legislatures could be laid up to the tendency of the members to urge the interests of their localities or their constituents rather than the general public welfare.

He quoted President Lowell of Harvard as saying: "It is this more than anything else that has brought Legislatures into discredit."

He explained that his proposed measure do not call for substantial changes in the law.

VOTE ON LOANS

In the belief that the taxpayer should have a more direct voice in municipal borrowing, the president would place responsibility for municipal loans squarely upon the voters.

His bill would leave the existing limits of 2½ per cent in cities and 3 per cent in towns as they are, but would incorporate in the general laws a provision authorizing indebtedness in excess up to 1 per cent, when approved by a two-thirds majority of the registered voters.

Cities and towns would not be allowed to take advantage of this provision if they have already outstanding indebtedness in excess of the limit.

He called attention to the present laws which prohibit municipalities from paying personal injury and death claims without special authority from the Legislature. He would set up a local board to handle these claims.

He would change the legislative rules so that no petition to authorize a city or town to pay claims would be admitted unless accompanied by a certified copy of the findings of the board.

Although the law now states that all claims against the State shall be filed with the attorney-general, who has authority to settle those up to $1000, many claimants ignore the statute and petition the Legislature, Bacon declared.

If a city or town wants to take a strip or corner off a park or playground or build a municipal structure on such land, he would give the municipalities the right to make such takings, without legislative permission.

Ends Life by Gas

August Kaih, 47, of Waverly st., Brighton, committed suicide by gas poisoning. Kaih was found sitting in the bathtub, clad in his trousers and a shirt, with the gas jet in the bathroom open and gas escaping freely.

LIBERAL CIVIC LEAGUE ASKS SEN. BORAH TO SPEAK IN BOSTON

APPROVE HIS VIEWS ON DRY LAW

Promise Him Biggest Audience in His Career at Speech

U. S. Senator William E. Borah, whose recent indictment of federal prohibition activities startled the nation, was today invited to come to Boston by the Liberal Civic League, Inc.

The league promises Senator Borah "one of the most intelligent, enthusiastic and largest audiences that you have ever addressed during the course of your public career."

The recent appearance of Gov. Richie of Maryland at Symphony Hall was sponsored by the league of which William H. Mitchell is chairman.

"The Liberal Civic League, Inc.," the telegram to Senator Borah read, "is deeply impressed by your indictment of existing prohibition conditions throughout the country. What you allege is corroborative of our own inquiry in Massachusetts.

"Although prohibition administration has been in friendly hands for the past ten years you find that with the present personnel nothing can be accomplished and you say that prohibition will never be enforced with the present personnel from top to bottom. You also say that the truth of the business is that the personnel is in need of drastic overhauling, but that there is no proposal now before Congress to help this particular feature of the situation.

"This indictment arraigns every officer of the government in any way identified with prohibition enforcement from the President at the top to the lowliest undercover worker at the bottom.

"We note with satisfaction that you concede that it is necessary to 'first admit the evil and then provide the country has the facts relating to be stated. The corrective value of your indictment will depend upon such a statement of specific facts.

"We are already in the midst of an acute discussion of the prohibition problem incident to the initiative petition now pending for repeal of the State concurrent enforcement law. Our organization is neither wet nor dry. It represents an 'in-between' movement by good citizens who are sincerely interested in general temperance and actual law and order and who are appalled by what is happening everywhere."

$500 BAIL FOR ACCUSED COP

Patrick J. Prendergast, patrolman attached to the Hanover st. station, pleaded not guilty before Judge Brewster in federal court to an indictment charging him with conspiracy to violate the national prohibition act. He furnished $500 bail pending trial.

Two other defendants named in the indictment were arraigned with Prendergast. They are Michael D'Agostino and Rocco Raphael of the North End. Raphael pleaded guilty, while D'Agostino not guilty. Both are in jail and will not be tried until they are liberated.

Mrs. Jennie Taddeo, the fourth person named in the indictment, has already pleaded guilty, and is at liberty on bail. The government charges that Mrs. Taddeo and the two jail inmates conducted a disorderly house on Sheafe st., North End, and that Prendergast became involved with them.

Reject Oil Products Storage Appeal

Boston street commissioners to-day rejected the petition of the Northlight Burner Corp. for a permit to store 42,00 barrels of petroleum products in the rear of 46 Hallet st., Dorchester.

The site borders on the Southern Artery and at the hearing of the application early this month strenuous objections to the proposal were voiced by residents of the district and the clergy of the new St. Brendan's parish.

Man Held in $40,000 Phone Box Thefts

What Boston police term one of the most important arrests in years occurred today when Special Officer Thomas Keating of Lieut. Gillis' special headquarters unit arrested Thomas Larkin, 30, of Providence, in a Cambridge apartment.

Larkin is charged with the larceny of telephone boxes and money from the New England Telephone & Telegraph Co. to the value of $40,000.

Known also as James F. Tucker and carrying a moniker in the underworld of "Hoops" Larkin, the prisoner is said by Lieut. Gillis to be leader of a gang which has been robbing telephone boxes not only in New England but states from Florida to the state of Maine.

FOILED IN LEAP

The prisoner was well dressed when he arrived at police headquarters to be booked. He was arrested at the home of a girl, known as Pearl Carter, in Massachusetts ave., Cambridge.

Larkin tried to jump from the window, but quick work on the part of the police prevented him, the officers said.

Larkin was traced to Boston last Friday. After Lieut. Gillis had learned he was in the city, Officer Keating was assigned to find him. Keating was doing a little sleuthing in the South End, when at Columbus ave. and West Newton st. he saw a man answering Larkin's description. He started for the stranger and the latter ran. Keating commanded him to stop. The man, who was Larkin, police say, ran down an alleyway off West Newton st.

Keating obtained the car registration and found that it was the property of Sheriff Thomas McNeil of Cumberland County, Me., which was stolen last week in Portland, Me. The car was found abandoned in Short st., Roxbury.

Telephone officials say that Larkin is responsible for stealing and tearing down pay station boxes from 400 public pay stations in New England, and that these boxes are value at $60. each. They also declare that the boxes contained money averaging between $40 and $50 making a loss to the telephone company of approximately $40,000.

POULTRY SHOW DRAWS CROWD

More than 4000 single exhibits were shown today at the opening of the 31st annual Boston Poultry Show in Mechanics building, which continues through Saturday.

The exhibits included pure bred poultry, some 2000 pigeons, and large numbers of turkeys, water fowl, ducks, rabbits, guinea pigs and other pet stock. The exhibition is open daily from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m., and is under the personal direction of Chester I. Campbell.

Large delegations of youngsters, taking advantage of the vacation period, were among the earliest arrivals, and the chief attraction the moment they entered the exhibition hall was the large pond for duck and other water fowl. Hundreds of breeders of pedigreed poultry from all sections of New England, Canada, New York and middle western states are here with thousands of birds.

Massachusetts Agricultural College is conducting a daily educational program of lectures and demonstrations by 4-H clubs of boys and girls from Middlesex, Norfolk and Essex counties. The 4-H club from Jamaica Plain high school has an especially attractive exhibit.

PROPOSES PART TIME SERVICE FOR JUDGES

Judicial Council Report to the Legislature Affects Superior, Land and City Courts

A plan for restricted service and compensation for judges of advanced years is contained in the fifth annual report of the judicial council made today to the Legislature.

In brief the plan is to permit a justice of a court who desires in advancing age to be relieved from full-time service, to be released at his request from such complete service and to enable him to continue service on a part-time basis, with pay commensurate with work done.

The council states that its sole desire is to maintain the maximum working capacity of the courts with no intention of creating or extending a pension or retirement allowance scheme. The proposed plan would apply to the Superior Court, the land court and the Boston municipal court.

HUNT EVERETT CITY HALL THIEF

Everett City Hall was robbed during the night.

The burglar is believed to have hidden in the building during a meeting of the City Council. He entered the office of City Collector John F. O'Connor on the first floor. He endeavored to chisel the safe open, but without success. The combination was knocked off, but the burglar evidently found his task too difficult and turned his attention to the till, which he jimmied and robbed of $13.

The police believe the thief slipped out the back way. The burglary was not discovered until City Hall was opened today. A large amount of money was left in a safe in the city treasurer's office adjoining the one burglarized.

CLUB KARNAK LICENSE IS HELD UP, UPSETTING NEW YEAR'S PLANS

BIG TIME IN CAFES AND HOTELS

Plenty of Liquor on Hand and Police Are Not Expected to Be Annoying

With the exception of the Club Karnak, one of Boston's most exclusive night clubs, the hotels and cafes of this city were planning a free and unrestrained New Year's Eve celebration.

The Club Karnak advertised it would reopen tonight, and was accepting reservations, but police and the licensing board protested its license had been held up.

Capt. Herbert F. Goodwin of Division 4 said he had the club's request for a permit, but had not forwarded it to the licensing board because he was still investigating.

According to the licensing board the license was held up pending the receipt of a complete police report on the new owners of the club, a routine procedure.

MADE PLANS TO OPEN.

The Karnak, which originally opened in Winchester st., near the Statler Hotel in 1927 with a social register patronage, was forced to close last month because of the stock market crash.

Plans were made for a brilliant reopening tonight under new management, with 500 guests present. As far as could be learned these guests were not notified of the hitch in the program due to the failure of the license to go through.

Orders for the conduct of the members of the headquarters liquor squad were given by Capt. George W. Patterson in a conference with Lieut. Daniel J. Hines, Sergt. William McKenzie, Sergt. William Cripps and Special Officer Bernard McGinnis.

The men were to report for duty at 6 p. m. prepared to continue their tasks until 4 a. m.

IN CIVILIAN CLOTHES.

There are 52 hotels and cafes listed as putting on celebrations, and they were to be covered by four details from the liquor squad.

Capt. Patterson, with Lieut. Hines and two officers, will constitute one squad. Sergt. McKenzie with his regular four men, another. Sergt. Cripps, with four men, and Corp. McGinnis, with five men.

The squads will wear regular civilian clothing, without colored shirts, but tan shoes and hard hats will be permitted. Each squad will make a tour of each of the establishments on its list, noting the number of guests, determining whether access to fire escapes is easy, making sure that no liquor is openly consumed, and seeing that the guests conduct themselves in an orderly manner.

NO FEAR OF U. S. AGENTS.

As far as could be learned they will not interfere with drinking, providing it is not done too openly, and does not result in disorderliness.

Prohibition agents will also rally round in civilian clothing, but they are expected to cause no more trouble than usual.

Several liquor cargoes destined for holiday liquor consumption in Boston will not be consumed tonight as planned, however, because they have been tipped up and captured on the way.

One cargo was that seized by the Coast Guards off Newport after the Coast Guards had killed three men of the rum-running crew.

PLENTY OF LIQUOR.

However, there is no shortage of liquor in the Hub and hip pockets will sag as heavily as on any New Year's eve.

Federal Prohibition Administrator Lewis today declared that he had no indication of an unusual amount of liquor in Boston, but admitted the public might be better informed on this point than himself.

There will be tons of noise makers, novelties and some very beautiful souvenirs this year. The souvenirs seem to get better annually with each hotel striving to outdo the other in the matter of worth while favors. Every hotel is providing the best possible dance music for the uproarious welcome to be given the 1930 baby.

ELABORATE MENUS

Maitres d'hotel declared there was more emphasis than usual put on New Year Eve menus, with the desire for unusual and tasty foods being more appreciated by those making reservations.

A peep at one big hotel's New Year menu reveals the taste for luxurious viands demanded by the dining-out public on this festive occasion. It starts out with a grapefruit cocktail appetizer, assorted olives, celery, salted almonds and celery knobs. Lobster cocktail, candied sweet potato, new peas, New Year's ice, little cakes and coffee.

State police will be out in force at roadhouses and on the high ways tonight.

Commissioner of Public Safety Alfred F. Foote today gave orders to Capt. Charles T. Bezanger to see to it that all troop and station commanders have every available man on duty.

WATCH DRUNKEN DRIVERS

Capt. Beaupre said the detail for this extra duty would number about 150 men and that a close watch will be kept for drunken drivers.

Automobilists are cautioned that every car appearing after noon tomorrow on the highway unaccompanied by a 1930 registration will be ordered off immediately. Up to that time, however, the law permits 1929 plates, despite the fact that the compulsory insurance for that year has expired.

The Tau Delta Phi fraternity will end its three-day conference at the Somerset with a big party in the Louis XIV ballroom, and the Canadian Club will have the Princess ballroom. Other hotels report every bit of dining and dancing space taken.

Manager W. W. Follansbee has announced that the Parker House and the Hotel Touraine are prepared to handle the greatest crowds ever gathered for a celebration.

OTHER PARTIES

The Boston City Club, pleased by the success of its first New Year's eve frolic last year, will have another one tonight in the main dining room. The entertainment will begin at 9 o'clock.

The Boston Square and Compass Club will have its annual party at the clubhouse on Beacon st.

Over 600 guests are expected to attend the second annual New Year's party to be held at the Longwood Towers Hotel, Brookline, tonight.

The entire house has been sold out for the occasion, which will include a New Year's dinner and dance. The affair will start at 9 o'clock, winding up during the wee hours of the morning.

St. Joseph's T. A. Society will conduct its annual New Year's eve party and entertainment in the club rooms at 224 Cambridge st., West End.

The annual fun festival and New Year's party of Granada Caravan, Order of Alhambra, will be held tonight in the Memorial high school.

The Columbus Club of Dorchester, composed of five councils of the Knights of Columbus, will have open house and dancing for members and friends at the club house, Pearl and Pleasant sts.

Charlestown Veteran Firemen's Association will tender a testimonial banquet to the Ladies' Auxiliary tonight.

The Cambridge Lodge of Elks will have a dinner, entertainment and dancing in Elks' Ballroom, Central sq., Cambridge.

There will be three separate club affairs at the Hotel Somerset. The Mutual Fire Insurance Association and the Canadian Club of Boston will have dinner dances.

A GRACEFUL CHIN LINE MAKES FOR BEAUTY

Do Not Let It Grow Old, Expert Warns Women

By MARIA JERITZA

ARE you letting your chin grow old?

This question is addressed not only to the woman in her thirties or older, but to girls in their teens and twenties, too, strange to say, many of the young girl now-a-days the beginning of a double chin, or else a suggestion of drooping in the above her throat, though these beauty defects are usually associated with age.

Maria Jeritza

Improper carriage of the head and shoulders is often many cases the underlying cause of this difficulty. A girl who walks with her head bent over or poked forward will soon lose the graceful outline of her chin and throat, which is so important to the beauty that as elusive that is kept at tension loses its suppleness in time and stretches and droops as the chin and neck muscles lose their elasticity when they are always stretched forward, thus drooping or possibly a double chin results.

Proper carriage of the body has been given by one writer as the secret of being in the fairly correct carriage of the chin head and neck might be the difference between a beautiful contour and one that is anything but genuine. You cannot be too young to pay attention to your spine exert if you begin to acquire grace and beauty, perhaps have through the years. Girls who are fond of reading, or confined at close work bending over a desk, or sewing table should be especially careful to avoid the habit of dropping the chin and letting the head droop. Dancing and tennis are good exercises to encourage erect carriage of head and chin and counteract confining work. In addition to a good exercise, a daily massage of the chin and throat will help to keep the skin firm and smooth. Begin at the base of the throat with the right hand working from left to right and at the same time your left hand from right to left. If you are over 25 your chin will welcome the smoothing oil of a good nourishing cold cream. Excellent nourishing creams can be bought under the names of developing cream, skin food, paste cream, muscle building cream and other descriptive titles. Or if you prefer heat two tablespoons of fat, pig, olive oil, add one drop of your favorite perfume and apply it to your throat and run with absorbent cotton. Use this cream or oil freely working it in from well down on your chest to the tip of your chin.

Then practice the exercise I have just described and finally remove all but a thin film of the cream.

In the morning a good astringent should trim the tissues of your throat and chin.

I know of none better than a lump of ice over which has been poured about half dropper of your favorite toilet water. Rub the tonic up from your chest and over your throat and well over the lip of your chin then pat your skin dry very gently with the towel. Needless to say the neck and chin should be well scrubbed with soap and water twice daily, before applying cream or tonic.

Remember that even more important than cold cream or astringent to the health of your throat and chin is correct posture. This means remember to stand and sit erect, with your head in correct position, nature in fact labors of thought has a tendency to direct correct carriage. Other than this, round the woman who is free from fear and worry and more with herself and the world will hold herself as straight as she thinking and mental attitude to wield life.

The debutante touch line the flapper is out of style. A queen's carriage is her secret. She will hold your neck straight and cultivate a lovely contour of chin and throat.

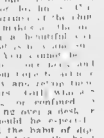
Drama Beneficial to All

By LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D., Ph.D.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

MANY people believe that motion pictures have done a great deal of harm to the spoken drama. It surely is a fact that road companies no longer enjoy the support they did and in many communities the inhabitants no longer see flesh-and-blood actors from the stage.



Dr. L. E. Bisch

The talkies have, of course, added a lot. The silent drama has become enjoyed tremendously through the sun chronization of sound and action.

Undoubtedly among the chief results will be actual plays with real plots, real characters, personal, real dialogue, real construction in short, it is more than back that the talking pictures will put new life into drama and help us to help it to its fullest possibilities.

What may a playgoer expect to get out of a play and?

Is the purpose of a stage presentation merely to pass the time of the spectators in an interesting way? Is it supposed to stir the emotions. Should it teach a lesson or point a moral, or what?

Much of the confusion about what a play should be as probably brought about through the grouping of various kinds of performances under a common name.

There are plays and plays!

There is the musical comedy by the same standards one applies to a tragedy, for instance or to a vaudeville show, as a farce, or a melodrama, comedy drama etc.

A broad and convenient distinction you and should be made between drama and entertainment.

Both have a distinct and valuable place in the lives of people. They also have a far-reaching effect.

We are more influenced by the plays and sketches and motion pictures we see than one might suppose.

Impressions recorded on the mind through the medium of interest is forceful and telling.

Plays which are purposeless, salacious, that deliberately set out to excite the baser, animal emotions are in effect, antisocial and act as such performances is merely exciting to no purpose, while the stimulated and mental effects upon youngsters male and female is pernicious.

The right entertainment can be as varied and beautiful as the imagination can possibly conceive and will be of a nature to preserve the best tradition of society and man the self respect of the onlooker.

Drama, on the other hand, has a deeper function.

Good drama arouses and stirs the emotions to the noblest and finest sense of life.

If the purpose of the dramatist is clear he will leave his audience stirred to human beings for having looked into the human heart what the content or plot of his play may happen to be even in spite of it deals with a sex problem.

What we should expect to find in plays is a clear cut sincerity of purpose and presentation.

Go to plays as often as you can if it proves to be the opposite then the talkie or at least the silent screen.

Everybody needs entertaining and the opportunity to lose himself in the phantasies of a play.

If you select your dramatic entertainment wisely, for your special needs, you will find it one of the most valuable factors in your life.

The Hat Is Not 'Tipped'

By MISS BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you please settle an argument? Isn't it only proper to answer the letter of a boy who has not previously left the city? My mother does not approve of it, and thinks I should not go over the letter. I think it is only polite to answer his letter. Please give me your opinion. MISS L.

I AM so sure that your mother's judgment is sound and right about this, that, of course, I agree with her. Mothers have a way of being intuitive about this sort of thing.

B IS correct. I cannot imagine where A ever got such boorish ideas about one of the most important of our social amenities. Apparently the word "about" A is speaking hasn't "been out in polite society."

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

1—If one goes out with a young man in the afternoon and intends to go out again in the evening with him, is one expected to ask him to supper?

2—If one knows a young man for three months, should a Christmas gift be given to him, and if so, what?

3—If, when you go to a theater, the usher asks how far down you wish to sit, what is the answer?

BILLY AND MICKY.

THAT depends on circumstances.

1—It would be hospitable and correct.

2—A Christmas card would, undoubtedly, be more appropriate. Or a Christmas token of friendliness and good wishes.

3—The man. The man always should take care of these social items.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you please settle an argument? Isn't it only proper to answer the letter of a boy who has not previously left the city? My mother does not approve of it, and thinks I should not go over the letter. I think it is only polite to answer his letter. Please give me your opinion. MISS L.

Her Thoughts Flew Back to College Days

Pat, huddled in the tunnel with the boy, cried "Would Guy ever come?" not knowing he was even then near in a staunch plane.

Miss Pat -:- Thrilling Romance of Airways splendor up the canyon walls. Terrified, Pat ran crimson to purple fading shown colors. She would soon be coming on Apache, dying low. He grew for the murmured about his leaping tears for starving. Pat drew Pat telling and calling on find her a clue as light is gone.

He had but an hour more with him. But he must find the where Bert of Pa back to his man. At Kingman he could trap him; might feasibly set him from the case.

He would not leave Pat first. He leaned for one moment toward the edge, his keen yearned eyes, the appearance though any moment it might open and Pat would steal over.

Suddenly his heart was an ice throat; sudden he was glued. A plateau reared not beneath him a wast, level but be a plateau large between both cliffs. And on the plateau he saw—a plane.

He swept out in a wide arc. Get command of the scene. No telling whose plane this was. No knowing what reception he might meet.

He would not yield to the crazed hope that shouted: "My plane! She's there! Pat's there!"

He came down and down, swinging far out over the abyss. As he drew inward to the plateau, a movement on the cliff focussed his attention. Something moved cautiously up the burning mountain side, something bowed down like a man under a heavy weight. Now it clawed the naked bluffs; now it crouched and slid its burden to the ground.

Guy made out clearly the strange exhausted figure. It was a man kneeling motionless beside some prostrate thing. Suddenly the man pointed upward. He waved an arm toward the plane. Then he got guardedly to his feet. He began working upward, leaving his companion sprawled in folds of yellow cloth lying there on the ledge.

The climber reached the plateau. He lay on the ground and slid on his belly toward a great sandstone shaft.

Guy watched the stealthy maneuver. With flaming intensity he prepared for battle. The man was his foe. Instinctively he knew it.

Bristling now with awareness he shot upward. High upward He got his pistol and his rifle. Cautious! They, too, might have rifles.

What could be the meaning of the fellow's abnormal stealth? Why was he hiding behind that shaft?

To these swift pertinent questions came the wild, surging answer: "That's your plane! They're here! They've got Pat!"

He circled low. His very breath took fire. It was his plane!

In a deathly calm he swept again and again over the plateau. Make sure. Good God make sure to get them!

One hundred yards from that sandstone shaft he came gliding ready, perfectly to rest. He sat in the cockpit, head down. Then he drew his pistol and shouted, blazing toward the shaft "Come out!"

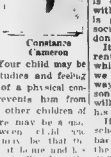
Why Children Like to Run Away

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

IT would take too long to attempt to list here the causes for truancy. The reason for a child's habitually running away from school is a complex one, and varies with each child who does so. But if your child is unfortunately classed in the "truant" group, it is YOUR first duty to find out in a spirit of kindly understanding just why he dislikes school enough to run away from it. There may be a physical reason behind it. Your child may be lagging in his studies, and suffer inferior because of a physical condition which prevents him from keeping up with other children of his age. Or there may be a maladjustment between your child and teacher. Or it may be that the child is unhappy at home and is finding even more pleasure in the routine of school and hates anything so that he may be away from "independence." Any one of these causes can be worked out if you go at it in the right manner.



Constance Cameron

The decidedly wrong method seems to be the turning over of the habitual truant to A person pernicously styled a "truant officer." The average man holding this position is not a student of child or adult psychology, is not especially diplomatic, is not the type of human being to inspire confidence and a heart-to-heart talk with the young offender. Quite to the contrary, I suspect that originally he wasn't expected to be that kind. He was an "arm of the law" intended to frighten truants into going docilely back to their desks. But we have found that fright doesn't work. It may for the moment, but it does not attain the ends to which it is supposed to be working.

When you turn a person over to a "truant officer" he is immediately a "first-time" lawbreaker. He is outside the pale of the law and is classed, even though slightly, with criminals. Do you think that is going to inspire him toward social conduct in the future? I don't.

It is uniquely a problem for parents to work out, and a problem which holds more significance than we suspect on first study. The way you handle your young person's efforts at escape from school will have a marked effect upon his whole life.

If your child runs away from school it surely means a real draw back from him in horror. It is the time for all love and understanding you can muster to come to the fore. It is a crucial moment. Find out WHY he wants to get away and try to help him adjust himself, for without the desire to continue in school he might better be almost anywhere else.

See if he is physically fit to attempt the work of his grade. Have a talk with his teacher, not a critical, aggressive "set-to," but an earnest attempt to find out if all things are understood between the two.

Is the child unhappy at home? Only your open-mindedness and kindly understanding will get at the truth of this problem.

Is it a premature desire to chuck school routine and work? If so help your child to see that he who goes furthest in business is the fellow who can think best, who can obtain and use an education. Schools are primarily agents to teach children HOW to think, not to stuff them with a great many irrelevant facts. Help the young person to arrange to do a bit of the work he likes best on Saturdays and after school hours.

Does he have a stupified allowance? Perhaps it is a desire for money which prompts the urge to work. Give him what you can legitimately afford and explain to him that it is all for the present and that he must help use it wisely.

Align yourself with your child, not the "truant officer."

Listen, World!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

BEATRICE CURTIS BROWN has written a stirring book for weak people. It is called QUEEN ANNE.

It is the story of a woman who became ruler of England a few hundred years ago.

BUT WHO NEVER BECAME RULER OF HERSELF.

Strangely enough for all it is a happiness of royalty, it might be the story of any common maid dead person to day . . . at you or of me, of the Jones family. It is a text book of bewildered human life and how it gets that way.

Queen Anne had great opportunities, great responsibilities... but she was never able to meet them. Her life moved through an amazing series of circumstances, but it never quite "clicked" with any of the circumstances.

It never quite clicked because, somehow, she always side-stepped action at the crucial moment.

She started by being afraid of life—as most young people do. And she continued to be afraid of life to the day of her death. She was always looking for escape and finding it.

She found escape in the flattery of those about her.

In the comfort of known ways.

In the rambling table.

In plots and counter-plots...

In self-pity.

In sudden squalls of anger and bullying tyranny that were simply a mask to hide the childish fear that always troubled her...

In a thousand alibis and excuses—

And when everything else failed her, she found escape in DREAMS.

She wasn't a bad character, or a good character . . . SHE WAS SIMPLY A CHARACTER THAT DIDN'T JELL.

She never turned up into maturity, in spite of long experience with the world . . . in spite of motherhood, widowhood, purple . . . she insisted on remaining a child.

Time after time she had a chance to grow up . . . a chance to act like an adult . . . but always she took refuge in her childish impulses.

One sentence sums up the whole book. "SHE HAD NOT BEEN EDUCATED FOR HEROISM."

That sentence would undoubtedly have surprised Queen Anne as much as it may surprise you. Like most of us, she did not think that heroism requires education. She thought that heroism was something that just happened. She was sure that when the time came she would be heroic. But she never was, for her character had never been trained along those lines.

SHE HAD NEVER TRAINED HERSELF TO MAKE DECISIONS AND STICK BY THEM.

SHE HAD NEVER TRAINED HERSELF TO FACE REALITY AND NOT DUCK.

She had always ducked. She had always ducked the scores of trivial crises which we all must meet each day. And so, when the great tests of life came, she ducked those, too.

She became a coward, not because she WANTED to be a coward, but because she didn't have the spunk and understanding to face each emergency when it arose. Cowardice "sunk up on her" slowly, insidiously, as a habit . . . as cowardice has a way of doing.

She wasn't very useful as a queen. She should be tremendously useful as an Awful Example.

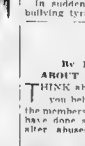
The Truth

By ELINOR GLYN
ABOUT MARRIAGE VOWS

THINK about this point, girls, if you belong to any clubs where the members discuss things. Women have done so much in America to alter abuses and ameliorate the condition of humanity. And a reform in the wording of the marriage vows would be a useful alteration.

I should suggest that those who approve of divorce should vote for a marriage formula which allowed for the possibility of the two people availing themselves of the law of their state. I should they later desire a divorce do not approve



Elinor Glyn

And those who do not approve of divorce should be the only ones who should be permitted to use the religious vows in their marriage.

I say this simply from my sense of logic. It seems almost ridiculous—if you can use such a word about such a tragically serious subject as marriage—at this stage of the world's common sense enlightenment, to send a young man and young woman out on life's river bound together by vows to eternity when they can invoke the law of the land to part them a few weeks later if they wish. And from this we get another viewpoint.

Many of you want to have a church service because it is smarter, more "fun" (if that word is not too out of date now!), without bothering in the least about the spiritual solution it entails.

Well, girls, do think over what I have said, and realize what you are doing first, and then, at least, you will know the penalties you are incurring.

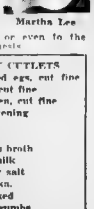
Winter Egg Recipes

EVEN at their top-notch price, eggs are an excellent investment when you consider their digestibility and nutritive qualities. The man of the house probably will strenuously object to having his eggs cooked any other way but boiled, fried or scrambled with an occasional omelet thrown in for good measure but there are many delicious "different" egg dishes that can be served for luncheon or the hidden supper or even to the Sunday night guests.



Martha Lee

ECONOMY OUTLETS

4 hard-cooked eggs, cut fine
½ cup ham, cut fine
½ cup chicken, cut fine
1-3 cup shortening
½ tsp. salt
½ cup flour
1 cup chicken broth
½ cup rich milk
½ tsp. celery salt
½ tsp. paprika.
1 egg, uncooked
1 cup breadcrumbs
3 tbsps. melted shortening

Prepare the solid ingredients, which should be kept rather coarse. Melt the shortening, add the salt and flour and stir and cook until frothy; add the broth and milk and stir until boiling; add the dry ingredients with the celery salt and paprika, mix and turn on a greased plate. When cold, shape into eight cutlets, dip in the egg, beaten and mixed with its bulk of milk and water, and then in the crumbs mixed with the melted shortening. Set on a greased tin and let bake in a hot oven until hot throughout. Serve with peas, asparagus or creamed potatoes.

EGGS WITH CREAM AND CHEESE

1 tbsp. shortening
2-3 cup thin cream
1-3 tsp. salt
¼ tsp. paprika
4 eggs
3 tbsps. grated cheese
4 slices toast

Melt the shortening in an omelet pan, turn the pan to coat the whole inner surface, put in the cream, salt and paprika. Break in the eggs. When the whites begin to grow firm, sprinkle on the cheese and let cook long enough to melt the cheese, when the eggs should be done. Remove with a skimmer to four slices of toast and turn the liquid in the dish over the whole.

SPANISH EGGS

½ cup rice
3 tbsps. shortening
1 slice onion, chopped
½ tsp. salt
1 cup tomato puree
1 cup stock, broth or water
½ tsp. paprika
4 fried or poached eggs
1 tbsp. parsley, fine-chopped

Heat the rice with a pint of cold water quickly to the boiling point, stirring with a fork meanwhile; boil 2 minutes, drain, rinse in cold water. Put over the fire with the shortening and onion and stir and cook until the fat is absorbed; add the salt, puree, broth and paprika and let cook over boiling water until done. Turn on a hot platter and set above it the eggs. Sprinkle the whole with the parsley. Serve at once.

Faithfully yours,

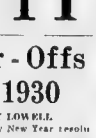
Swear-Offs for 1930

By LUCY LOWELL

THESE are my New Year resolutions. I am offering them for you to read here hoping they may help you to form resolutions of your own especially the last few of the which I like best of all:

I am going to be happier in Nineteen-Thirty than ever I have been before—less given to finding causes and occasions of unhappiness. Living has convinced me that I exist at the standpoint of Opportunity.



Lucy Lowell

Progress and Joy of Being, and since this is true there is nothing to be wretched about—save only my own shortcomings.

I resolve to cultivate patience and tolerance during Nineteen-Thirty.

I resolve to love more beginning in Nineteen-Thirty, with the love that is a recognition of the Brotherhood of Man and the Fatherhood of God. I find that most men and women I meet are very much as I am; they have about the same likings and dislikes, aspirations, faults and good qualities. Most of them can and wish to do better; most of them are friendly, simple, sincere. I resolve not to criticize or even scorn or dislike wise make the going hard for them.

I resolve to make my rule of life the Golden Rule throughout Nineteen-Thirty.

Finally I resolve that when I break these resolutions—as undoubtedly I shall—I will make them all over again, beginning a personal and private New Year each time it happens; and I hope however often it may occur I always shall begin again with courage and high heart!

All of this in Nineteen-Thirty!

Is He Worth Your Love?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

"I have been puzzled by a certain problem for the past month and thought perhaps you could give me some enlightenment on the situation.

"On my way to the office every morning I pass a certain firm and meet a young man who is employed by this firm, who usually arrives there the same time I pass. I saw him for months but never paid very much attention to him until one morning he said "Good morning" to me and smiled, and I, thinking it was a mere human polite, acknowledged his greeting. Thereafter we repeated this every morning, he always being the first one to say "Good morning," until about a month ago, when he glanced at me as usual but did not speak to me. for me to say it first, but I did not do so as I do not make a habit of talking to men without an introduction. Since that he passes me by without even looking my way.

"What do you think of this, was I justified in my viewpoint? Or is an introduction unnecessary in a case like this?

"He seems to be a nice young man and I am very sorry if I have offended him and would like to square myself if possible. Would it be proper for me to greet him now even though he pretends he does not see me. Several times I caught his glance, but he turned his head immediately. I will await your advice on the matter.

"THANK YOU."

YOUR problem has several distinct and significant angles. In the first place, Edith, how much do you know about the young man you pass on your way to the office every morning? How do you know he is not a married man? What do you know of his record? It will be wiser to make it a rule not to talk to men without an introduction, even though they may attract you. Wait until some thoughtful one you may share in common introduces you. If that never happens, remember, you can do very well on companionship, since you do not really know him at all.

Another point, when a man and woman who are acquainted meet, it is always the privilege and duty of the woman to speak first, signifying in this way that she wishes to continue the acquaintance.

AUCTION BRIDGE
by WILBUR C. WHITEHEAD

SMALL SLAM AND FINESSE

While I agree that a slam is not usually biddable if it depends upon finesse, I do not agree that it is not usually biddable if it depends upon the possible winning of one of two finesses

Sound bidding whether Auction or Contract is based upon average probabilities It is not probable that a finesse will win, it is only possible; but it is probable that one of two finesses should win Consequently to refuse to bid a slam with two possible finesses in the hand is in my opinion an excess of caution The above hand illustrates the point in question.

Salient Points of Bidding

Auction: The bidding at Auction presents little or no problem The only possible question might be whether South, following South's original bid of one Diamond should disregard his Club honors and bid a No Trump instead of two Clubs The principle, however, is fairly well established whenever a game is assured at either one of two declaration, the suit containing the greater honor count should usually be preferred.

Contract: The bidding at Contract starts the same as at Auction, with South bidding one Diamond North now stops to decide whether he should bid five or six Clubs His partner's Diamond bid has assured him of two Quick Tricks which must be either the Ace-King of Diamonds or a sure trick in Diamonds with two of North's missing suits Kings. Thus whether South's high card strength lies wholly in Diamonds or is commanded, South should bid a Small Slam but should not risk a Grand Slam.

If South's 2 Quick Tricks happened to be the Ace-King, then one of two things should give North the Small Slam, either the Ace and King of Diamonds in Dummy will give him the needed two re entries for the two finesses or what is more probable is one of his two Major tenaces will be led up to scoring him a Small Slam immediately. Thus, upon the probabilities of the hand, a Small Slam is soundly biddable

Salient Points of Play

East with no sound high card lead, leads initially his fourth-best Spade, the five Following this lead, the Dummy hand is exposed With a Small Slam assured with this lead, all that remains for North to play for is the possible Grand Slam. Winning the first trick with the Ace of Spades over South's King, North plays two rounds of trumps dropping those held by the adversaries and leaving the good Nine of Clubs in Dummy. Following this play, Declarer leads three rounds of Diamonds, trumping the third round and hoping to find the outstanding six Diamonds split 3-3 As they are not so split, and he has but one entry in Dummy, he must abandon his efforts to establish a long Diamond and enter Dummy with the Nine of Clubs to try his Heart finesse The finesse failing, North makes but the Small Slam.

As are not fully matured plans to be heard will be out enough to communicate with the state president, Mrs. Reed said now.

She says of the club

"All manuscripts of our composers who are really beginners in the field, and who find it difficult to secure a hearing, will be considered, and if possible, all will be given a hearing, with an audience provided. We hope that this new department may prove one of the most interesting and helpful to be of service to a large number of composers."

It is the belief of the state president that America is becoming more and more truly a musical America

What with the Great War one can look back and appreciate as never before many things and never before thought of except as a passing fancy. Nurses in the United States and Canada who cheered our boys when spirits were flagging and who gave up comforts and home and the sweetest associations, if their report to our friend and fellow citizen, Clara Barton, of the soldiers who risked their lives for humanity at all marked a new epoch era, the effects of which are lasting.

Our leading physicians are coming to realize more and more the healing power of music, and as the most beautiful of all the arts is coming into her own. And we who have long labored in the vineyard are thankful

BEAUTY WARNING

Just a timely warning from Mrs Flora K. Chamberlain in an address of the Massachusetts Federation of Women's Clubs, who will speak against the use of artificial grounds upon which to paint natural beauty.

"Those of you who have to meet in places which are lacking in beauty and charm have a very effective way before you. Don't use your club members to consider beauty when they have to look at the ugly background which some club programs have to be produced. Poor color and bad design may be parts responsible for the lethargy which creeps over many of our meetings."

Print Frocks Appear Beneath Those Winter Coats

THERE is something about the sight of your friends all departing southward which is liberating. And instead of them in search of a printed frock! When you find it you can't help smiling over the cruel irony of it and feel a bit happier over the prospect of another three months of cold weather.

Of course, if you are unready in a warm clime such a frock just means the first of a gay series in prints which you have promised to peruse this season!

This print frock idea is not to be confined to sun parties in the south, for it is going to become a real trend this winter, but as it always happens in winter, it has had to take a minor part in early activities. However, now is the time for its appearance, and you want one right away as a tonic for the mid-winter wardrobe feeling!

The bright print on a dark ground is especially suited for the mid-winter days, for such a print fashions the ensemble model we have pictured in black silk crepe.

The belt is placed at the normal waistline and accented by an applique bow-knot theme. A sheer double collar and matching cuffs provide the ubiquitous lace touch.

In other accessories for this costume, you might smartly choose these. A hat in black felt after Gabs Mono which has a tiny tucking 1-4 on the crown front, the brim has a long right

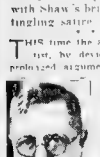
Mrs. Baines ... Whitford Hunter

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

IT matters little whether you are disciple or unbeliever; the philosophies of Bernard Shaw invariably give relish to the theater. In "Major Barbara," at the Hollis, probably not one in a hundred of the Theater Guild's third consecutive first-night and since had ... that was heard, ... you ... on ... with his ... an ear that every Shavian shot at human frailty was enjoyed to the limit. It was just a very nice evening with Shaw's brilliant wit and tingling satire.

* * *

THIS time the spotive drama tist, by devious detours of prolonged argument mixed with ... parkling di ... alogue, lured the playgoers into a happy frame of mind upon the very doubtful doctrine that poverty is a sin, more than that, a crime which behind all others are but harmless misdemeanors. The play was an argument from the top of the curtain to its fall, but there was good ... never a dull moment. Shaw left us ... no peace, he pricked them with barbs that stung, he ridiculed them and even made cheap sport of them.



Nicholas Young

ONE is never quite certain whether Shaw is trying ... entertain an audience or is so inutile ... ... up his sleeve. Here he pilloried religious faith in brutal fashion, mocked the pseudo-Christian ... tion and finally, as you might expect, panned ... views ... upon the man of means. ... was no human freedom ... preached, not even decent salvation, unless you had the price. Nothing mattered but money, urged his principal character. Cynically enough, the moneycalling in life was the ... mate ... ture of high explosives for war.

FOR his purposes, the author used for his puppets Salvation Army workers; drew heavily upon the British upper classes to prove his case and demonstrate their inanities, and sprinkled the tage with London's riff-raff as the final clincher. Whether you believed it or not, you were treated to splendid entertainment, never dull, always dancing with brilliant passages. For it was all argument!

* * *

STANDING out in the performance were Dudley Digges ... whom you might call the Shaw spokesman and Elliot Cabot who played an subtler ... professor of Greek ... ... Barbara ... Frieda Inescort ... good up touch under the ... of the principal ... ... and Peter Warren ... ... worthy performance as ... man who ... too tough to be saved. The acting generally was of high order.

* * *

THERE is always the promise of spirited entertainment in plays by Shaw. In "Major Barbara" you discover dry humor, playing heavier with established institutions. Question it if you must but Shaw makes you like it.

Formerly exports and imports about offset each other. Imports are now $37,974,798, against exports of $16,807,475. More than 50 per cent of women's shoes imported come from Czechoslovakia.

BULLS DEFIANT AS OLD YEAR NEARS END

By STANLEY W. PRENOSIL

New York, Dec. 31 (AP)—The final stock market session of the year today found the bulls making a grand gesture of defiance after their reverses of the past two months by marking up scores of issues 2 to 20 points.

The advance, which was most effective in the steel, publicity, rail road and electrical shares, took place on a relatively small volume of trading.

CASH SALES MADE

Cash sales for the purpose of establishing income tax losses were in unusually heavy volume, estimates of the number of such transactions ranging from one-fifth to one-third of the day's total trading.

Cash trades are cleared today, making any losses taken deductible in 1929 incomes, whereas stocks sold in the ordinary manner are not cleared until Thursday, carrying them within the new calendar year.

The day's business news [illegible] little to [illegible] of [illegible] Iron Age in its weekly review pointed out that prospects for a [illegible] encouragement in the unabated demand of the railroads, the agricultural steel industry and the [illegible] ment manufacturers, [illegible] fresh evidence of strength in the scrap market.

MIDLAND STEEL UP

It further acts [illegible] that the last seven days of December saw ingot output at between 40 and 50 per cent of capacity, compared with 55 per cent a year ago, but improvement is already under way and the current week will find production at 55 to 60 per cent in the Valley, at 60 per cent at Chicago and 75 per cent at Pittsburgh.

Midland Steel Products preferred was the spectacular individual par former in today's market, soaring [illegible] points. Philadelphia Company ran up 12 [illegible], Western Union 10, General Electric 8 and Columbian Carbon, Detroit Edison, American Water Works, Air Reduction, Auburn Auto, A. M. Byers, J. I. Case, Michigan Steel and Allied Chemical sold 3 to 7 points higher.

Among the many stocks to advance 4 points or more were Republic Steel, Westinghouse Electric, Simmons Co., Atchison, Canadian Pacific and Jersey Central. U. S. Steel common, which gained 2¾, closed at 156⅜ in the recent reaction, compared with 170 for a gain of more than 3 points and then ran into some profit taking.

Copper and oils were rather sluggish.

Call money renewed unchanged at six per cent with indications that the rate would be maintained. Wall Street is looking forward to a distribution of more than one billion dollars in dividend and interest payments next month.

RECORD YEAR FOR BOSTON

The Boston Stock Exchange enjoyed a record 12-months trading in 1929, Total transactions for the year were in excess of 20,000,000 shares, an increase of some 8,600,000 shares over 1928. Reflection of the increase was found in the sale of a Boston Stock Exchange membership at a record figure of $415,000.

Back of the substantial increase in trading was the great public speculation in the securities. The broadening of the local market through listing of new issues was another important factor. Where once trading was dominated by the [illegible] and investment trusts and utilities, today the metal shares continue to play a prominent part in day to day trading.

The early months of 1929 will be marked by a move in copper shares. Favorable metal statistics and rising copper prices were the underlying factors. The average price of copper stocks attained a record high of 98.80 on March 19.

The next big development was the rise in utilities. Superholding companies as International Superpower and Electric Bond & Shares were favorites. Massachusetts Utilities Associates, American Telephone, Boston Elevated and Engineers Public Service were other outstanding issues.

In October occurred one of the outstanding developments of the year—the denial of the Edison Electric petition for higher rates on of its shares. On Oct 14, the first trading day following announcement of the decision, the stock [illegible] broke 81 points to 198. The year's high of 440 was made in August. In the market crash which subsequently followed the shares sold down to 291.

The beginning of the speculative bubble in October and November carried practically the entire list above all previous levels. Investment trusts suffered a virtual collapse. Copper shares broke badly, with the index registering its 1929 low of 45.96 on Nov. 13. Trading during the final weeks of the year was characterized by backing and filling movements. Price moves were in a moderate range.

DISSOLVE ZINC CARTEL

At a meeting held in Brussels on November 18 1929, it was decided to dissolve the international zinc cartel, effective December 31, 1929, or one year and eight months after its formation. The decision was reached when there appeared to be slight possibility of a compromise among opposing factions of the organization.

REPORTS GOOD INCREASE

Although a general industrial stagnation prevails throughout Hungary, as the result of the low prices received for agricultural products and because of the continued credit stringency, the domestic coal, iron, and steel production, and the consumption of these products, are reported increasing.

SILK CENTER IN MANCHESTER

Britain's silk yarn and cloth industry finds a center in Manchester, which city produces almost half the country's output, according to a report from Consul Wallace E. Hessmer, Manchester, made public by the Department of Commerce.

ENGINE MARKET EXPANDS

Considerable expansion has been recorded in the market for crude oil engines in Greece during recent years, Assistant Commercial Attache Ralph B. Curren, Athens, reports to the Department of Commerce.

INDUSTRY IMPROVED

Conditions in the Turkish raw-silk industry have improved considerably during the past year.

Swedish Bank Rate Is Cut to 4½ P. C.

Stockholm, Dec. 31 (AP)—The Swedish Riksbank reduced its discount rate by ½ per cent, to 4½ per cent, at the same time reducing its interest rate. The private banks and the Government owned Postal Savings Bank have taken similar action.

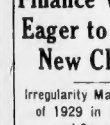
Finance World Eager to Open New Chapter

Irregularity Marking End of 1929 in Industry and Securities

By B. C. Forbes

NEW YORK, Dec. 31—Most people will be glad to have these final days of 1929 over and to start a new year which is anticipated with unusual confidence though not exuberant hopefulness.



B. C. Forbes

Happily, pessimistic predictions concerning Christmas trade have proved wrong. Total buying, taking one section with another, is reported as better than generally expected. The usual lull has come since set in, of course.

The stock market has had to absorb a lot of selling to record losses to be written off income tax statements. Such selling will end with the year's end and Wall Street will be relieved to close chapter 1929 and to open chapter 1930.

Despite the record-breaking dividend and interest obligations to be met this week, call money did not rise above 6 per cent a year ago. Time money, 4 to 4½ per cent, is 3 per cent cheaper than 12 months ago. No serious squeeze is looked for today or tomorrow; New York bankers have the monetary situation thoroughly in hand now that "bootleggers" have withdrawn more than $2,000,000,000 of their fly-by-night funds.

Everybody predicts very cheap money immediately after the turn of the year. Day-to-day money may sink to very low rates, but banking authorities caution against assuming that time money will decline drastically. If all the construction and other activity pledged is promptly launched, anything like acute business depression should be averted. In this case, presumably, there will be normal demand for capital. Moreover, foreign borrowing is likely to be on a substantial volume. Then, too, we have already exported $100,000,000 gold since the end of the money market broke, and the likelihood is that shipments will continue for some time.

Prospective borrowers who figure that they can do better by waiting may find they have miscalculated.

All last week the stock market was irregular, spells of buying being followed by spells of selling, with the general result for the week a nominal loss of ground. Even so, average quotations on the New York Exchange stand one-third higher than they did on Nov. 13, the most gruelling day of the panic.

The rail division was not potently influenced by the Interstate Commerce Commission's mail-and-water recommendations on consolidations — recommendations they could be called. The fact that the commission has left the whole situation much as it was before. Its unexpected proposal that a fifth eastern trunk line be patched together has actually complicated a tangle already complicated enough. The financial world now looks for none action by Congress designed to expedite the carrying out of the spirit of the 1920 transportation act. But this will take time. Meanwhile, uncertainty may continue to rule.

Industrial reports this month, as last month, are very irregular and rather disappointing on the whole. It is believed, however, that both the motor industry and the steel industry will make distinctly better showings starting next month. Notwithstanding all contradictions from high places that "normal" buying and employment be continued, there has been a pronounced withholding of orders in certain basic industries. Producers have proved able to hold out against drastic price-cutting, but it cannot be denied that there has been an increase in unemployment at not a few points.

The general commodity price level has been fairly well maintained. Washington estimates that America's agricultural purchasing power next year will equal this year's.

The new week will bring the customary flood of "forecasts" from leaders in all walks of life. It is accounted the proper thing to spread nothing but sunshine. How much, or how little, effect such outpourings will have upon sentiment—and upon action—remains to be seen.

My guess is that the stock market will quickly though perhaps not drastically, reflect the drying up of tax-loss liquidation, but that it may take longer to reflect the putting into action of the multiplicity of expansion programs pledged by most industries.

CURB MARKET ENJOYS SHARP UPSWINGS

By CLAUDE A. JAGGER

New York, Dec. 31 (AP)—The curb market enjoyed one of the sharpest upturns in weeks today as the year's final session—but trading continued in light volume and the day's activity represented little more than year-end readjustments for tax purposes.

Shorts who have been waiting rather nervously to cover at a time when their profits will not be taxable until 1931 rushed in do so this morning, as today's regular transactions will not be cleared until Jan. 2 and therefore will not appear in 1929 statements. In a market as thin as this one has been for the past fortnight, moderate covering was sufficient to cause a rapid rally.

By early afternoon, however, the covering movement slackened, and prices slipped off a little from the best levels of the morning. A moderate amount of last minute tax selling by longs was evident in an unusual number of cash sales.

Gains of around 10 points, or more, were common in the high priced, volatile issues, and advances of one to three points were the rule among popular trading shares. Utilities held the advance.

Northern States Power A advanced about 10 points, while Electric Bond & Share, American and Foreign Power Warrants, Standard Gas, and Commonwealth Edison sold up about two to six points. Central States Electric was a strong spot, mounting more than three points to above 20, while the Goldman Sachs-Harrison Williams issues generally were strong.

In the investment trusts, Blue Ridge and Shenandoah common mounted about a point, and Goldman Sachs 2 points. Selected Industries, a strong spot in the low-priced group yesterday, was again in demand. Southern Corp. rallied a point. Lehman Corp. encountered a little profit-taking on yesterday's advance. Pennroad dropped to a new low record, two points being lost.

In the industrials, Aluminum Co. of America, Timken Roller Bearing, and Tubize shot up about 10 points each. Tung Sol Lamp, Zonite Products, American Cyanid B were in fair demand. Deutz, which dropped to 1 yesterday, and closed at 1½, reflecting the bankruptcy action, sold up to 1¾ this morning. Fox Theaters A sold a little higher. Gulf was a strong spot in the oils, mounting more than 4 points. Indiana, and Cities Service were firm. Vacuum sold off at a time but then rallied. In the mines, Newmont sold up several points.

Cuba Cane Sugar's Bonds in Default

New York, Dec. 31 (AP)—The New York stock exchange today revised today that the principal and interest due tomorrow on the 6 per cent 7-yr. and the 10-year 8-yr. convertible debenture bonds of the Cuba Cane Sugar Corp., totaling about $25,000,000, will not be paid. The corporation has been in dire financial straits for some time due to poor conditions in the sugar industry and a permanent receivership was appointed on Oct. 29.

The company reported for the year ending Sept. 30, a net loss of $805,832, which, after preferred dividend requirements, resulted in a deficit of $8.81 a share of common stock. The company at present is being reorganized.

AVIATION IS PROGRESSING, SAYS CRAM'S

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 31—For several years the progress of aviation in this country has been greatly aided by a series of extraordinary tests, according to R. H. Cram, president of Cram's Aeronautical Reports.

These have taken the form of transoceanic flights, endurance and altitude hops, refueling contests and other such procedures. They have admirably served their purpose, focusing public attention on what is faltering industry in dire straits. Through their aid, a rush of activity, even in the face of public indifference, has come about, a ready market having developed for aeronautical stocks for all kinds.

However, now that the industry is definitely out of the doldrums and on a stable keel, and performances will no longer have much effect upon public interest, for the first place almost every feat that in the beginning meant so much will have ceased to do so, often that little more than passing attention is even given in the newspapers to new records, and, strangely, many such performances, ending as they sometimes do in disaster, are more likely to retard progress at this time than to further it.

But another series of noteworthy events of a constructive nature, breaking shortly, would again catch up the aeronautical industry from its present rather dormant condition, caused by a combination of circumstances, and start it off with a rush on the 1930 season. This is in connection with the future extent of aviation, but the immediate present is of the utmost importance to the manufacturers. The rapid developments of 1928 and 1929 will not necessarily be a criterion of the future over-optimism if operations can be continued on the same scale throughout the coming year.

Perhaps the introduction and production of an approved type of Diesel engine would provide the necessary stimulus to keep public interest in the aeronautical industry at high pitch. Engines of this design are being tested at the present time, and some have performed in satisfactory manner. However, none have reached the stage of production, which will take the industry out of the seasonal mass. How much will be in impossible to determined at the present time.

Steel Corporation Annually Richer

New York, Dec. 31—The statement of United States Steel Corp as of Sept. 30 explains why that stock has so many followers. Total assets showed an increase of nearly $100,000,000 over Dec. 31, 1928. The corporation has on hand cash and marketable securities of over $360,000,000, against $220,000,000 on Dec. 31, 1928. The Steel Corporation grows richer because it usually has a big surplus after dividends at the close of each year. It spends $75,000,000 to $100,000,000 annually for new construction.

BONDS WIND UP 1929 WITH FIRM TONE

By JOHN L. COOLEY

New York, Dec. 31 (AP)—The bond market was noticeably firm on the last day of a year which had seen prices severely depressed during its first three-quarters by the high interest rate accompanying speculation. Foreign loans recovered from yesterday's heaviness, although the movement of this group was scarcely more than irregularly higher. However, the volume of trading in all groups was extremely light.

The course of bonds since the collapse of share prices has disappointed some followers of the market, who had anticipated a livelier enquiry than developed.

Investment bankers point out, however, that the readjustment forced by that collapse has been rather slow, so far as fixed income securities are consumed, for the recovery of bonds had been retarded by the firmer money rates which normally appear at the holiday season. Nevertheless, the contrast between interest charges now and a year ago is very sharp, and most of the market comment holds that basic conditions are favorable to real improvement as soon as seasonal depression has lifted.

Fractional gains appeared in a large number of loans, while a few advanced a point or more. In the latter group were Consumers Power 5s, New York, Westchester & Boston 4½s, Kansas City Southern first 3s and United States Rubber 5s.

Baltimore & Ohio sold 4s, Consolidated Gas of New York 5s, Kansas Gas & Electric 6s and Denver Steel 7s rose nearly a point. Standard Oil of New Jersey 5s, Standard Oil of New York 4½s and Union Pacific 4½s advanced small. Smaller rises occurred in Erie 5s, New York Central 4s, Wabash first 5s, National Dairy Products 5½s and Union Pacific first 4s.

Announcement of a receivership for New York State Railways was accompanied by a decline of about a point and a half in that traction company's 5½s. Reorganization of Cuba Cane Sugar Company to meet either principal or interest due to-morrow in 7s and 8s had been discounted and the former bond rose. The new company has been in receivership for several months.

United States Governments ruled firm, with the fourth Liberties were active in the earlier part of the session.

Because of the holiday tomorrow no new bond offerings were marketed.

AT THE DIAL

By THE RADIO EDITOR

WHEN the weary year draws its final expiring gasps, weighted down with Christmas hangover and tattered by the buffetings of haphazard circumstance over three hundred and sixty-odd sunspin circuits, it is not permitted to die in peace. There must be the inevitable recasting of accomplishment throughout the twelvemonth. We love to look back and gloat over what has been. Radio follows the tradition. One official says that the transatlantic broadcast was the greatest achievement in the history of radio. Another tells how many hours of time were devoted to the airing of Yale crew races. Somebody else points with pride to the multiplicity of 50-kilowatt stations which have come on the air.

FOR the listener, it is probable that the most important event in radio during the past year was the purchase of his new receiving set. The eleven next most important events are the residential monthly payments. His success in topping each of these hurdles spells his particular degree of satisfaction.

DESPITE the busy-ness of our seven hundred radio stations, American radio during the past year melts into a picture which for the average citizen holds few high lights. Perhaps few individuals but because all features have been so uniformly good. Radio's nonpaying guests have come to expect a high degree of excellence as the customary thing. If you ask the man on the street to outline the march of radio during 1919, he will probably, after considerable mental strain, name presidential inaugural, Amos and Andy, baseball scores, world series, weather reports, football, Christmas carols and True Detective Mysteries. The chances are that he will forget completely each thing that an Enrico Caruso, Paul Whiteman, Vincent Lopez, Ben Bernie, Ipana Troubadours, Eveready Hour, Clicquot Club Eskimos, Atwater Kent Hour, Cities Service Concerts, Goldman Band concerts, Sinfonietta, Revelers, Cliquot Club Eskimos, Silvertown Cord Orchestra, Fleischmann Hour, Fada Orchestra, Ipana Troubadours, Eveready Hour, Clicquot Club Eskimos, Atwater Kent Hour, Cities Service Concerts, Goldman Band concerts, Sinfonietta, Revelers, Cli

Engineers Work Well

Nearly a Billion Saved Yearly

(Copyright, 1929)

ENGINEERS, representing the entire automobile industry, a scientific standardization of minor parts, have arranged to save automobile owners of America $840,000,000, nearly one billion dollars a year.

The Engineers' Society and the United States Bureau of Standards have worked to reduce multiplicity of shapes and sizes in bolts, couplings, screws, nuts, etc.

This helps to understand why the United States leads in the world's automobile industry.

If automobile makers would now combine to standardize repair shops, garage work, cost of maintenance, generally, the public would bless them, and buy more cars.

JANUARY, FEBRUARY, MARCH are the open season for pneumonia, quickest and deadliest disease known to man.

Also the most familiar and least feared.

Every human being has a horror of leprosy, which takes from seven to thirty years to incubate, and which NOW can be cured.

Few worry about pneumonia, which can snuff out your life in a week, almost without warning.

Not quite without warning, though. A hard cold, a humid nose, a short cough, a chill, a fever—and you can be sure that your lungs are filling up. The crisis comes quickly. Even if you survive, you will be weakened for months after.

Take no chances. Keep warm and dry. Sleep with your windows open wide, every night. Oxygen is the best specific.

And CALL A DOCTOR if you feel yourself slipping. He is cheaper than an undertaker and more welcome.

William's Mistake

He's Idle, Slavs Are Working

(Copyright, 1929)

WILLIAM HOHENZOLLERN, recently Kaiser, had, it appears, a low opinion of the Slavs. They were "born to serve," he told the Austrian Minister, and "from the King down they can be bought with gold."

He was talking about Serbia just then.

Perhaps the former Kaiser would reconsider that today. He himself is "at leisure," as vaudeville artists say. The Slavs are building their civilization steadily, learning from their own mistakes, as did Peter the Great, Russian Czar, beaten by Charles the Twelfth of Sweden, saying good-naturedly: "My brother Charles is teaching me about war."

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Dec. 31—The sweep of the drug store counter luncheon has been a blow to quick eateries in the business and manufacturing districts. While 100 lunch rooms were being shuttered last month, more than 250 drug stores were opening for business.

Signs that used to herald "Eat" now read "Drugs." Not only at the noon hour, but at breakfast time, they are crowded. Many make no pretense of selling drugs—save cough drops, hand lotions, hair restorers and the like. They cash in on the sandwich trade huge chain drug stores have built up.

In the Times sq. district there are a dozen so-called drug stores that do not employ graduate pharmacists. One observes frankly in a window sign: "We fill no prescriptions." Still another does not even handle proprietary or proprietary medicines. Only soft drinks and sandwiches.

One of the big appeals is the swift service, but the greatest attraction of all is their strictly New York psychology. There are thousands who do not like to be seen entering or leaving the model cafeterias, one-armed lunchrooms and automats.

The drug store camouflage hides such embarrassment. They may, for all those who see them know, be merely dropping in for a simple drug store purchase. Such foolish vanity is responsible for a half dozen hole-in-the-wall "drug stores" in almost every mid-town block.

Luncheon fare for thousands of office workers consists of a sandwich and a soft drink, which to the uninitiated sounds monotonous. Yet an investigator, walking from Herald sq. to Columbus cir., on Broadway, found 234 different sandwiches. Also 182 different soft drinks. But no drinkologist yet has thought up one for the thirsty to touch a long cool drink from a rusty dipper.

Broadwayization of Park ave. becomes noticeable. In other words, a streak of "vulgar trade" peers through the soft buff elegance. Until recently, a few lony auto salons graced the southerly strip and here and there an "apothecary shop," a deluxe cafe or a florist. But that was all. A new hotel is to slice up its front with cubicle shops and several apartment houses are to let down the bars in the same manner. Such rentals are so stupendous that few building owners can resist them. Two hotels pay their entire overhead with the rental revenues.

The metropolitan huntsman is not always the rugged, stalwart type of popular imagination. One of New York's crack deer and moose hunters is a florist, a headlined dilettante, whose dandified dress turns heads in a city of foppish dressers.

But in the woods, he becomes a savage killer. The ague that comes even to experienced hunters in exciting moments never touches him. And he has been praised by old guides for his adeptness in the art, to use the indelegant term, of "gutting a deer."

David Belasco, the theatrical producer, has a Roswell on his payroll. He is a former newspaper editorial writer and he has for 10 years sat in at important Belasco conferences and attended rehearsals. He has recorded in minute detail all the showman's activities and conversation. It will be his job after Belasco's passing to boil the material down to two volumes, arrangements having already been made for its publication.

The BAER Facts

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

WE look back with Marginal Dimpled eyes on the passing of the exhausted semester of 1929.

We know that 1930 will be bigger and better. Even if the worse happens it will be an improvement.

It was a year of paper profits, mergers, call money and no whites of eggs or other antidotes.

We might have known that there was a tempest brewing in the ticker-pot when Bobby Jones lost a tournament and Philadelphia won the World Series.

We recovered very quickly and the bloom of health is back on our red elbows.

President Hoover established a congress of big business men in Washington and the large boys are going to make 1930 a year that will blister the records.

It's team work that makes things hum like a wasp on a contented cow and that's what we have got.

You keep your shoulder to the wheel and we will keep our foot on the brakes.

You pull and we will lug and that's the spirit that breaks the rope.

Let's look at the world through rose-colored glasses. If you can't afford a rose use a tomato.

There will be plenty of work next year for anybody who is willing to swing a pick-axe or a sledge.

That's good news if it is addressed to somebody else. The reason why we are all dashing to the left is because the line forms to the left.

We belong to the white-collar mob and we don't even trust it in the laundry.

We would like to see the pick-axes and the sledges rising and falling like the silver bells in a snoring gallery but we do not care to be on the executive end of a six-pound hammer.

We fell out of the lap of luxury in 1929 and the parachute failed to open.

Not that we object to working for a living. The only reason why we do not care to earn our bread by the sweat of our brow is that we don't like our biscuits damp.

We were rich on paper in 1929. We would like to catch the magnate who tossed that match in the waste basket.

H. G. Wells Writes on "The Science of Life"

In Collaboration With

Prof. Julian Huxley and Geo. P. Wells

BALANOGLOSSUS is another extraordinary associate of our phylum. It is a white worm-like creature —the length varying in different species from an inch to three yards —that spends its life burrowing in mud at the bottom of shallow seas.

H. G. Wells

It is far less like a vertebrate than either Amphioxus or a young frog or squirt, yet it is more like a vertebrate than it is like the members of any other phylum. It has, for example a great number of gill-slits leading out of the sides of its throat, and the possession of a perforated throat is apparently a chordate peculiarity; as the animal nourishes itself by swallowing mud or sand and digesting out any organic matter as it passes through the intestine, it may be presumed that the slits are respiratory.

Again, the front part of the body is very mobile and is used for burrowing; it is supported by a thick-walled tube of narrow bore that runs forward from the roof of the mouth.

The cells of this tube have a structure suggestive of the cells of a notochord, and it is, like a notochord, just below the principal nerve-cord; moreover, in embryo vertebrates the notochord develops as a tube that is pinched off from the roof of the digestive tube. It is at least possible, therefore, that this structure is homologous with the notochord.

On the other hand Balanoglossus has a point of resemblance with a very different phylum, the the echinderms (star fishes, sea-urchins and their allies); in many species the eggs hatch into minute larvae that are like the larvae of sea-urchins, except that they grow into Balanoglossus.

Thus, to link vertebrate and echinoderm is a remarkable achievement.

Classified in the same group as Balanoglossus are two genera of similar creatures that live like polyps in colonies, surrounded by gelatinous tubes, and capturing suspended particles by means of their branching tentacles.

The best known is called Rhabdopleura. It marks the extreme limit of the chordata phylum. The chordata ground plan, reduced to the mere shadows of cord, nerve-cord and gill-slit, is traceable no further.

1. A Contrast of Anthropod Vertebrate

AND now we come to a second great phylum of living things. This includes all the insects which creep and buzz about us, bite and pester us, sting and poison us, the spiders that shroud our rooms and cellars, the lice that infest us, and earwigs that creep and run from every stone we turn. It is a strange, competitive world side by side with the chordate phylum, unsympathetic, alien, and for the most part hostile and malignant to it.

We can best consider its distinctive differences from other phyla by taking first a concrete example, and for that the size and accessibility of the lobster (Homarus Vulgaris) and make it a convenient type.

The general appearance of a living lobster is sufficiently well-known. His prevailing color is dark blue; the familiar red color of boiled lobster only appears in the boiling.

On contrasting him with a vertebrate, two outstanding differences immediately present themselves: first, his whole body is covered with a sheet armour; second, in the place of our legs and arms he is provided with a great number of hard, jointed limbs.

The front half of the lobster is protected above and at the sides by a single sheet of stiff armor. That part is called the cephalothorax—meaning head and chest in one.

The hinder half consists of a chain of seven movable segments; each segment is strongly protected, but in between the segments the layer of armor is very thin—so thin that it is flexible.

This part is called the abdomen —absurdly, as we shall explain.

Its segments are joined together in such a way that the abdomen can either be held straight out or curved forward under the cephalothorax; by suddenly flapping his abdomen forward in this way the lobster can jerk himself rapidly backwards through the water, and it is by means of a series of such flaps that he retires when seriously alarmed.

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

LOVE and marriage, like the gods of the ancients, are always demanding "sacrifices"—and reaping on their promised rewards.

There is a "becoming length" in love affairs just as there is in bobs and skirts; and a woman's intuition should tell her just where to "cut them off," before they make her look ridiculous.

When a girl has finished getting in and out of this season's dresses, she hasn't much time left for the higher culture, and her religion is all gone, anyway.

It's a wise husband who understands his wife's "signals," and knows enough to "stop" at the green light of jealousy in her eye, or to "go" at the red light of anger.

Violent love making used to consist in falling down on your knees and begging a girl to have pity on you; but, nowadays, a man considers himself positively impetuous, if he just sits still and permits her to pet him.

All the world's a stage; but it takes a philosopher to enjoy the tears as well as the laughter, and to know the hero from the villain.

A thin shin, like thin hair, never hid the bald truth from any woman, no matter how much she may pretend not to see through it.

Before marriage, a man looks at a woman through a prism, and sees her in glowing colors; after marriage, he looks at her through a microscope, under the cold north-light of domesticity.

Love is like the law—the further a man looks into it, the more anxious he is to keep out of it.

The girl who stakes her happiness on a man's promise to divorce another woman and marry her, is a good gambler, but an awfully poor psychologist.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

NEW YEAR rhymes are hackneyed things,
Each an oft-told tale;
But the New Year, ah, it brings
Nothing worn or stale!

Every day a blossom there
On the tree of time,
Every hour a petal fair,
Every breeze a chime!

New Year rhymes, we know them all
New Years long ago
Taught us how their rhythms fall,
How their measures flow;

Yet with every New Year's dawn
Stirs this urge to sing,
Greater gifts than all years gone
Will this New Year bring!

Many Kinds of "Oil"

The Wise Virgins Had the Kind They Needed. Are You Saving the Kind That You Need?

(Copyright, 1929)

THIS picture is published because many people will be interested in the drawing by William Blake, the eccentric genius.

You know the old Bible text:

Then shall the Kingdom of Heaven be likened unto ten virgins, which took their lamps and went forth to meet the bridegroom.

And five of them were wise, and five were foolish. They that were foolish took their lamps and took no oil with them.

But the wise took oil in their vessels with their lamps.

While the bridegroom tarried, they all slumbered and slept.

And at midnight there was a cry made, Behold, the bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him.

Then all those virgins arose and trimmed their lamps.

And the foolish said unto the wise, Give us of your oil, for our lamps are gone out.

But the wise answered saying, Not so; lest there be not enough for us and you; but go ye rather to them that sell and buy for yourselves.

And while they went to buy, the bridegroom came; and they that were ready went in with him to the marriage; and the door was shut.

Afterward came also the other virgins, saying, Lord, Lord, open to us.

But he answered and said, Verily I say unto you, I know you not.

Watch therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh.

There are many kinds of oil that people need. In the Bible allegory, you read about Wise Virgins and Foolish Virgins. Presumably without oil, those Virgins could not go to the wedding, or join in the festivities. The Wise Ones had a good time. This picture shows how they felt.

In those ancient days, oil played a most important part, for without olive oil, in the days of the Greeks and the ancient Jews, and others, life would have been difficult.

They used the oil in cooking, they drank it, they used it for their lamps. And after the bath, which did not occur too often, except among the highly civilized Greeks, who bathed every day, they covered the entire body with oil.

Oil doesn't interest us very much now, except for our automobiles. We press a button when we want a light.

But there are other kinds of "oil" as important to us as that oil that the Foolish Virgins forgot to bring along with them.

There is the kind of "oil" that we call money. It makes things go very smoothly. It makes you order the other man instead of being obliged to obey the order of the other man.

Today money is, in moderation, the oil of life. In excess, it is the curse of life, when it comes to be the only thing thought of.

Make it your business, as you go through life, to save wisely, without stinting or hardship for others, so that you may gradually accumulate enough "oil money" to grease and ease your last days.

There are other kinds of "oil," without which life amounts to little. The most important, of course, is education, or, rather, information. You may have strength, health and money. But without information to make thought interesting and efficient, without education which includes not only reading, writing and arithmetic, but the world of history and of science, you are not much better off than those Foolish Virgins that William Blake shows here.
